A beautiful descent directly after heavy rainfall. Perfect to combine with the Hüttenwistobel when everything else has too much water (Hüttenwistobel in the morning, Schreustobel in the afternoon). Don't rely on the water level you can see as you exit the canyon. Due to the springs, the canyon only has about 1/5 of the water level you can see on the road. So the best reference would be the Hüttenwistobel, if this already looks almost dry, then the Schreustobel is also almost dry, so better go to the Panärato... (machine translated)

Had drilled the canyon on 24.09. After a lot of rain the days before we had already set up the Hüttenwistobel because the surrounding canyons had too much water. Some anchors are set so that you can rappel through several places. We also downclimbed several places. A few video impressions of the ascent:
