Summary: (machine translated) Every year the access is closed from 15.September- 1. October because of Jadgewirtschaftlichen reasons; long alpine rappel canyon with about 40 rappels; predominantly single hooks (not always easy to see!); catchment area approx. 2 Km ² ; limestone; exposure north; some Holzverklausungen; long access and descent; mostly little water; final waterfall C65 also divisible; steep emergency exits if at all only at the beginning and possibly before C48 right possible!; absolutely take emergency equipment; hiking trail alone already worthwhile!
Hydrology:
Access: (machine translated) From Salzburg South, take the A10 to the Salzburg junction. Then continue on the A1 in the direction of Vienna/Linz. At the Voralpenkreuz junction turn right at Sattledt onto the A9 Pyhrn freeway. Follow this road until the exit St. Pankraz/Klaus. Then turn left at the intersection onto the B138 and continue until just before the Steyr bridge. Turn right here and continue alongside the Steyr towards Hinterstoder. Nine kilometers after the village center of Hinterstoder, at the end of the Stodertal valley is the hikers' parking lot/exit point (Gasthof Baumschlagerrreith 14°05'46,5 "Ö/47°38'43,2 "N).
Approach: (machine translated) From the large parking lot for hikers (€3,-/day) at the Almgasthof Baumschlagerrreith (724m) follow the hiking signs "Stoderer Dolomitensteig" next to the stable, first on the slightly ascending forest road until you reach the sign "Wanderweg" at the hairpin bend. From here you leave the forest road. Follow the path over a steep embankment next to the ditch, which you cross after a short while. After the crossing there is a hiking sign with times (Hochsteinalm 1h15min and Lögerhütte 1h30min + Stoderer Dolomitensteig) and shortly after the forest road ends. Then the steep ascent begins in serpentine up through the beech forest. Arrived at the first saddle, you have already done half of the climb to the alpine pasture. With a beautiful view of the valley and the surrounding mountains, the path continues up to the alpine meadow in front of the Hochsteinalm (1296m) and on to the already visible Lögerhütte (1370m). From the Lögerhütte, keeping to the left, the actual Dolomitensteig begins, which leads in the following part over increasingly narrow sloping path with little difference in altitude along steep rock faces and small water channels to the rope safety and Schwarzgraben. Follow the rope belay in the Schwarzgraben to the point where the trail crosses the stream. Entry at 1370m.

Tour: (machine translated)

The Schwarzgraben is a long beautiful alpine rappel canyon with about 40 mostly short rappels. The glued anchors are not always immediately visible due to their gray color, but they are well placed. One should not be fooled by the mostly low water passage, as the rappelling points can change considerably due to wood and gravel accumulations during high water. In the upper part, the canyon is rather open except for a short (two rappels) narrower passage. After a high 48m + small 4m rappel point and a few smaller steps that can be descended, comes a cut canyon section with initially large wooden entanglements (be careful with the rope retrieval!). More small steps with some wood follow. Shortly before an hourglass as rappel anchorage it becomes more open again. Six short rappels and two walking and downclimb passages follow. After the second walking and rappelling section it remains cut for a longer time (nine rappels up to max. 20m). Before the last four abseils (5m/20m/10m/65m) the canyon opens with a view into the valley. The last rappel point can also be divided (exposed chain anchor on the right below pools after 25m). After the last high rappel, follow the streambed for about 20min over some downclimbs to the streambed and weir at the fort road (possibly rappel 5m over tree before streambed). Exit at approx. 780m at the small weir.

Return: (machine translated)

From the small weir turn right on the forest road shortly back to the parking lot.

All existing anchors OK, some could be added. Partly clogged. Overall a longer and beautiful tour. (machine translated)
