Summary: (machine translated)
Short canyon with small slides, jumps and rappels, quickly accessible and therefore very popular.
ATTENTION: according to signs on site, it is strictly forbidden to enter the canyon.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Coming from Göstling an der Ypps, drive about 2 km in the direction of Hochkar/Palfau. After the bridge over the Rotmoosbach, turn right along a short, steep sand road to a forest road sign. There is a modest parking area here. Alternatively, you can park down by the bridge, but then the access is about 10 minutes longer.
The prohibition sign is right at the start of the forest road.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow the forest path along the canyon rim upwards until clear footprints lead into the streambed.

Tour: (machine translated)
Jumps and slides up to 5m (feasible depending on the gravel level) or rappels. The highest rappel point is an 18m high sloping plate which can also be downclimbed.very suitable for children and beginners. Most of the sun is in the morning and can be combined with one of the other canyons in the area or a kayak/raft trip on the Salza.

Return: (machine translated)
After a 1.5m high slide, the canyon ends at a fence that is stretched over the creek. To the right via climbing tracks up to the sand road and further to the car.
