Summary: (machine translated)
Without great interest, it is a mountain stream with a couple of rappels and interesting areas, with water all year round but very discontinuous in its sporting development. The area is of great beauty and worthwhile but the long access, the track for the car so narrow, ... everyone can evaluate whether it is worth the effort.

Access: (machine translated)
We'll start in the charming village of Camprodon, in the heart of the Girona Pyrenees
We'll take the C-17 to Ripoll, where we'll take the C-26 and then the N-260 toward Sant Joan de les Abadesses. A little over a kilometer past the town, we'll take the C-38 to Camprodon.
Right at the entrance to Camprodon, there's a roundabout where the left exit takes us to Llanars via the GIV5264.
Once we reach Llanars, also at the entrance, we'll find the turnoff to the right toward Feitús and the Oratori de Sant Pere at a small plaza featuring a unique sculpture.
Take the trail that climbs to Feitús (very narrow—proceed with caution) through lush forests and green pastures, with a stream running alongside—a unique setting that's worth the trip just to enjoy the surroundings.
As the valley begins to narrow, the road starts to climb toward Feitús; just before reaching the village, there's a very sharp left-hand hairpin turn where you can park without any trouble.
If we continue, we can park at the Oratori, which is 200 meters further on to our left; if we have a tall vehicle, we can try parking at the top of the village, just before the access trail begins.

Approach: (machine translated)
We will follow the track that goes up to Casa Solà where we will turn off onto a track that goes off to the right, already quite lost and then by a half path to go down to the stream almost at the height where it receives the Grossa stream at the height of the Closa dels Forns, open area that we will avoid by force until the first narrow.
Note: in order not to put too big a map, the image has been shortened and indicated the access below its real entrance, with this option, if we are able, we would enter directly into the first gorge.

Tour: (machine translated)
Discontinuous, a few ramp rappels and little else.

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the Queroses trail bridge, we will exit to the right and return to the fork where we parked.
