Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Chorrillo canyon, it is a short canyon, a school canyon but not simple, with good facilities and short accesses and returns.
"Due to its proximity to the sea, it was the first canyon to be reequipped with titanium chemical tensors by Enrisk2" fte fedtfm.
It has a much longer first part, not so well known, which is briefly referred to here.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Getting to Radazul.
If we want to do the integral version by the TF274 from the TF28, arriving at Machado, with the Jagua mountain on the right, just before the sign we can park on the right.
To do the short version, with the access vehicle we take the freeway to Radazul Bajo, when we get to C/ Valdés, in the right curve we park just before the sign.
With the return vehicle, for both options, we will continue down to the beach, we park in C/ Elcano in the enabled part. In good weather it is necessary to go early to be able to park.

Approach: (machine translated)
For the lower part the access is very simple, in the other sidewalk to where we parked, in the curve, there is a wall and an area to go down, we continue by the cement stairs until the end. There is or there was a parabolt from which to rappel to the riverbed, you can also rappel from the fence or climb down from the right.
To make the integral version, we continue from where we have left the vehicle and there is a track to the right towards the bed of the ravine, we follow it towards NE until it disappears and from there cross country to the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
See mole

Return: (machine translated)
We will continue towards the beach and from there to the pedestrian walkway that we will take on the right to go up to the parking area.
