Summary:
Obvious sunny waterfall max. 63m equipped largely Procanyon. Rarely visited, both the access and exit are now overgrown (2026). A machete or gardening scissors are a must to exit following the directions of AIC (see weblink).

Hydrology:
One of the rare canyons in the valley that flows free with no hydraulic system on top.

Access:
Park at the bridge below the waterfall on the sunny south side.

Approach:
River left in between terraces, sometimes marked.

Tour:
Some technical handlines, the first is from a tree as the original anchors are destroyed. The second involves a slippery traverse (one intermediate glue-in hook to stay in balance). Mostly Progetto Procanyon anchors, apart from the first handline and the last 20m. The 63m is said to be the longest drop in the valley without relay.

Return:
Largely overgrown. AIC mentions to follow the stream, however it is slightly easier to exit left after a short while of bushwacking.

Progetto Procanyon anchors & never used. For a canyon that flows freely and has no dam on top it is unfortunate nobody ever goes. The approach and above all, the exit is very overgrown. Updated the file after today's descent.
