Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as the Ruisseau de Caussou, it is a small but beautiful descent in Ariege, leafy, well formed... You can't ask for more in less distance.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
On the N20 from Foix to Tarascon-sur-Ariège, continue on the N20 towards Ax-Les-Thermes.
At Luzenac, turn left over the bridge towards Unac (D2). We will reach the village and cross it, after leaving the cemetery on one side we will see a track that goes down to the river. Park by the bridge.

Approach: (machine translated)
Immediate from the bridge.

Tour: (machine translated)
A steep descent, with plenty of water flow, lush, multiple drops and slides. And two wonderful waterfalls.

Return: (machine translated)
When the canyon opens, we will exit to the left by a small path that leads us to the track that takes us to the bridge.

Nice short canyon; we rebolted the start, so it’s now possible to rappel from one side of the bridge in the canyon to add an extra rappel. After the first section, it’s now possible to cross over the water; we rebolted the second rappel and also cleared away a lot of fallen trees. The exit is still a bit unclear, but there is a path on the left bank of the river past a stone man. (machine translated)
