Summary: (machine translated)
Beautiful activity of this canyon, an access by conglomerates to this headwaters and the possibility of continuing the canyon by water hiking through the Turmeda (return vehicle in Esplugafreda). To take into account the difficulty to go up under the Rocaespasa de les Comes.
Enviable and wonderful environment for spring and autumn days, in summer in the afternoon very hot and in winter we can find the waterfalls frozen.

Access: (machine translated)
Bcos de la Terreta
By the N230 towards Pont de Suert
Access to Bcos de la Terreta
At p.k. 101, just before the detour to Arén, we have the detour to the right to Orrit and Sapeira. We will have to follow this small road towards Sapeira and Castellet at all times.
Once we get to Sapeira, we must continue straight ahead without entering the village, towards Castellet and just at the exit park.

Approach: (machine translated)
On the right is the path heading east that climbs towards the mountains, before the kilometer cross the ravine Canaril and 300m later crosses it again to start climbing through a pine forest to the ridge that separates this ravine Llepós. Once on the ridge we will follow the path to the peak above Les Comes.
To our left, north slope, a beautiful forest towards the area of Castellet, to the left the rocks on the conglomerates and cuttings of the descents of Les Comes.
We will walk around this first cirque, the Coma Capella, for a kilometer until just where it ends and begins the next, here we will turn south to go down its divide about 200m before turning left towards the riverbed.

Return: (machine translated)
The first thing to say is that it is not easy, we have two options, each more interesting:
* Through the Turmeda valley (water hiking) to then climb to Esplugafreda (combination of vehicles) or follow a losing path to climb to Sapeira.
* Under Rocaespasa de les Comes, going up its belts to go to the exhaust channel of the R4. Hard climb, difficult but very interesting
