Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Dry canyon except after heavy rains, very long given its approach and development. It is worth it for its views and flying rappels.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
On the TV3421 that goes to Roquetes, just before Mas de Barberáns, at pk 12.1 we have a detour "La Vall".
After two kilometers we have a detour, we take it to the left and continue about 2 kms until a sharp right curve (180º) here we park the car back.
If we have a high car, 4×4 or the track is in good condition we can continue along it until the end with the access car.

Approach: (machine translated)
With only one car we will walk along the track until it ends.
In both options where the track ends there is a path that first follows the riverbed and then turns left, heading south, to go up the mountainside. We can continue straight ahead until the small pass and from there go down to the riverbed, just above the first cirque.
In the track we continue the path to the next pass and then go along the riverbed but it is not necessary because we lengthen it without taking much out.

Tour: (machine translated)
Several cirques separated by open sections of hiking. The cirques with their rappels are worth the effort.

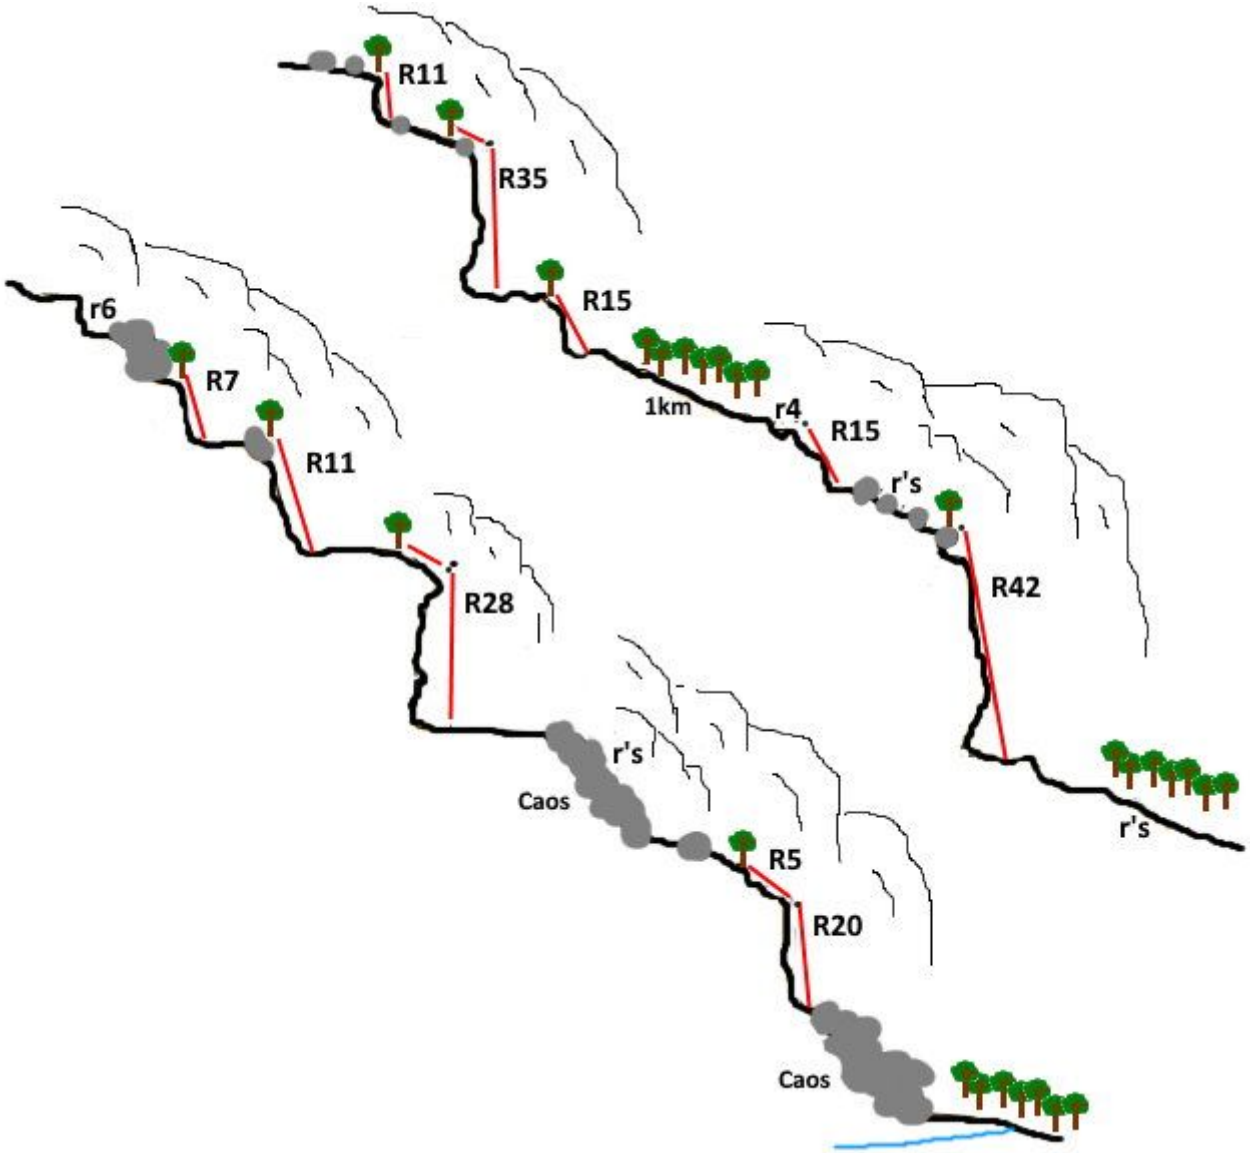

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the confluence of the ravines, we turn left over the riverbed to reach the track.
