Access: (machine translated)
From Bregenz via Alberschwende and Andelsbuch to Mellau and on to Au. Directly at the exit of the avalanche gallery of Au you turn left and get to Rehmen. At the church uphill to the Gasthof Rehmer-Wirt. Park either near the inn or continue about 150 m fairly steeply uphill (orographic right of the stream; follow signs to "Wasserfall") to a wood and material storage area near the flood control structure.
It is also possible to make a car transfer by driving a second vehicle from the church about 20 m (back) in a northwesterly direction, then turning half-right, crossing the Rehmerbach stream and then driving up the so-called Rehmer Halde in long serpentines on a good, albeit narrow, tarred road. After the 4th serpentine it goes into a forest and there is a sign prohibiting further travel by car. Here the upper Kfz. park.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the car park on a small hiking trail up to a waterfall and here right uphill along a dilapidated path to an undercut rock wall. Walk along it and then up again.
Soon you reach the official hiking trail and a few meters later follow the signs in the direction of Satteleggalpe/Schönenbach. After the forest border you reach the Wika-Alp. Now keep left to the lower hay barn, where climbing tracks lead down into the canyon.
If you have moved a car, from the car parked above, continue up the tarred road. Passing a junction to the left, we go a few meters after the next left(!) Serpentine right onto a hiking trail , which we follow to the wooden footbridge over the Rehmerbach.

Alternatively, access without moving from the village center orographically right of the creek climb on a small hiking trail to the height of the Rehmer Halde about 1090 meters above sea level. Then follow the road uphill for a short time after the linkserpentine right again uphill follow the trail about 150m to a small transition over the canyon.

Tour: (machine translated)
Downclimb, slide and rappel in relatively open canyon.
After the 4th rappel under the overhang, we find the next chain anchor by going up the chute on the left from the pool. The chain is then on the right below the chute (see photo!). From here we then rope to the belaystation above the 28m double step.
On the long 45m diagonal rope, 40m ropes are also sufficient, because the last 5m can be downclimbed (left) or slid down (right).
Before the last rappel from the slide brake, you can get off at the wooden footbridge on the hiking trail.

At the entry you can find wild garlic even quite late in the year.

Return: (machine translated)
After the final waterfall over the slide brake, which you may have already seen during the access, turn left at the wooden bench out onto the hiking trail and down to the (lower) car.

A beautiful "beginner" canyon with great rock formations. The protection is good and it can also be climbed excellently on ragen. The double step is overhanging and the "long rappel" can be slipped on the rope. After the last rappel (boulder barrier), you can exit orographic left at a bench and follow the path downhill. We followed the course of the stream and found one or two great places to squeeze through. We would rate the difficulty as II / A-B / 2 As usual, you can find a video of the tour on Instagram at https://www.instagram.com/reel/DI__kMoooBt/?igsh=MTdpOWZoYXc2ZW5iYQ== (machine translated)

Hook ok. Since the chain stand after the 4th abseil under the rock wall seen too late, we have put around the clamping block left under the small rock wall a tape sling and have roped from there to the stand above the 28m double step. (machine translated)
