Summary: (machine translated)
Rappel canyon, forest gorge

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
At the upper parking lot, leave a vehicle at the parking lot 100 m before the station of Zachlorou in the Vouraikos canyon. From there, drive back to the main road and turn left and follow it for 6.7 km, then turn left and follow the dirt road until another dirt road branches off to the right and park there.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow this slope to the exit. Open the gate and turn right to the stream, which you can reach through a hole in the fence.

Tour: (machine translated)
The tour begins with lots of waste from pruning and leftover building materials. It only gets better at the second tree abseil, then you find yourself in a forest gorge where you have to downclimb a lot. It rarely becomes very gorge-like and the really beautiful passages are limited. The belays are old and a combination of expansion bolts, ancient lashing straps and eyelets.

Return: (machine translated)
At the railroad track, turn left uphill to the station to Zachlorou.

I found the way back on the railroad track much nicer than the canyon. (machine translated)
