Summary: (machine translated)
A sequence of small gulches with interesting pools of water.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
The gulches are not continuous.

The canyon dries out quickly. Even if the water level rises slowly, it can rise sharply during storms.
Best done in spring or after rainfall.

Access: (machine translated)
From France, drive through the Bielsa tunnel, down to Lafortunada and then up towards Revilla. Pass Lamiana and 1 km further on, the path above Trasito leads past a sheepfold; park there.
The shuttle bus is not essential. If you use it, park a car beforehand at the exit of the Miraval track in the Estaronillo parking lot.

Approach: (machine translated)
We immediately attack the small bridge that leads over the Trasito. Exit of the upper part, start of the lower part.

Tour: (machine translated)
A sequence of small gulches with interesting pools of water.

You should walk it when the water level is high, otherwise it loses much of its charm.
However, it dries out less quickly than its neighbor, the Consusa.

Return: (machine translated)
At the exit of the canyon, continue along the riverbed to return to the vehicle at the bottom, if you went there and back by car.
Otherwise, a path leads up the right bank at the ruins, which takes you to the road to Revilla in 30 minutes. From there, descend the asphalt road on the right to return to the sheepfold.
Another way back is to climb back up from Estaronillo on the right bank, always keeping to the left. This path leads directly below the sheep hut to the upper parking lot.
