Summary: (machine translated)
Watery great canyon with a 17m rappel besides walking, wading & possibly some swim

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We drive from the city of Karak on the "50" down to the Dead Sea. After 26.2 km we come to the T-junction "Mazra Junction", there we turn right and continue on the "65" northward for 25.4 km and come to the bridge over the Wadi Mujib. We park our car in the parking lot on the right after the bridge. Here we also find the guides, without whose company we cannot do the tour (canyoning prohibited with permission reservation).

Approach: (machine translated)
We walk back on the "65" again 1.9 km in southern direction. Normally a transport is organized insofar by the guide. Then left up the bad track, at the top then turn left onto a track coming from the right and follow this track, finally steeply down to Wadi Mujib.

Tour: (machine translated)
We wade through the narrow entrance gap that the river has eaten into the rock face. After some time we come to the only rappel (17m), which is completed largely outside the beam. After some time of further walking we come to some steps, some of which are set up with fixed ropes (also to bypass a siphon), some with iron clamps.

Return: (machine translated)
At the end of the tour before reaching the road bridge exit to the right on a concrete wall.
