Summary: (machine translated)

Short and alpine but beautifully polished dolomite gorge between the small and large Buchstein.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)

From Admont via the B117 over the Buchenauer Sattel. At the Griesbauer farm, turn right onto a sand road which you follow for a short distance to a small parking area before the start of the forest road.

Approach: (machine translated)

Cross the bridge and follow trail no. 664 to the Sparerriegel/Kleinen Buchstein. First hike for about 15 minutes on the forest road into the valley floor, then turn left onto another forest road and soon follow a beautiful hike up the forest ridge. Briefly follow the forest road again before turning left onto a path. At an altitude of approx. 920m, branch off to the right into the mountain forest (trail marker on the right, 10m after that a mossy boulder with a small cairn, the trail becomes flatter) and cross horizontally towards Griesbach without a path. The mountain forest is light and easy to walk through. After 10 minutes you reach a clearing below several large boulders, cross straight over and ascent briefly on the other side to a salt lick. Below the salt lick, cross into the canyon on a clear game trail which you reach below the Karende.
