Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Dry ravine, little known and with a somewhat hard access because there is no clear path and it is all scrubland, although there is the possibility of making a different approach by a lesser known path, but more comfortable and faster.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We must get to Vallibona
On the N232 towards Morella we take the CV111 to Vallibona (16kms), we cross the village towards Rossel, we continue for a couple of kilometers until two very sharp curves (right and left) downhill. We will follow a couple of kilometers until two very sharp curves (right and left) downhill and soon we cross the river Cervol. Here we park.

Approach: (machine translated)
We will go up the slope in front of us leaving the ravine to our left, trying to find cattle trails that will take us to the cliffs and cirque of the ravine. Here we cross it to the orographic right and we will pass under the cliffs surrounding them to be able to later climb to the crest. From here up there is a small path that takes us to the Mas de Clapissa and that leaves us at the head of the ravine.
There is another better option, which is to go by path to the Mas de Ferrer, from there cross country to climb to the top, until you reach the head of the ravine, which takes about an hour and use the same path that crosses the ravine for the return.

Tour: (machine translated)
Dry ravine with a lot of vegetation.

Return: (machine translated)
We arrive at the Cervol river, we go up to the car, or we can leave better to the left by the path that crosses the ravine, and where we have gone on the approach, if we have done it that way (short approach).
