Summary: (machine translated)
Generally dry, except for thaws and heavy rains, it is an open canyon, without much atmosphere, but with a commendable biodiversity. Its long approach and the little character of the ravine have ensured that it has not forged a name in the area, yet there are few in the area with its slope in its meager descent, almost 300m of slope in just over 650m of development.
Collecting and little else

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
In Andorra La Vella we will take the CG2 towards Envalira.
Just in Encamp we get into the village and go to the street Hort de Godí, where we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
See map

Tour: (machine translated)
Open, between shales with a steep slope to be overcome.

Return: (machine translated)
You reach the same street where you parked following the riverbed. We will exit on the right
