Summary: (machine translated)
The Cuesta Yanu canyon is a simple canyon, without large abseils, to be done in spring or autumn with good flow. Its attraction is the waterfall that gives it its name, 30m of waterfall something boxed that possibly we will have to secure in its access. After it we go out to the bridge of the road.
The descent of the ravine seems to be prohibited for being in the park of Ponga, consult possible restrictions.

Access: (machine translated)
We are in Cangas de Onís, we will take the N625 to go up the Sella.
At pk 135 we have the detour to the right to Viego by the PO-2, we will follow it until Beleño where we will turn left to Sobrefoz. We will go up the river Ponga by a charming little road to Sobrefoz and when we arrive we will go down the other bank by the PO-1 towards Abiegos. Soon we have some small houses on the right, the village of Yanu, and just after passing it, a half-track, half-road on the left goes up to Boiles. When arriving at these houses we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
At the entrance to this village, a small path, almost lost in the vegetation, goes off to the left and uphill into the valley, through the forest to a small bend with the stream on the right, time to go down to the riverbed.

Tour:
Ver topo

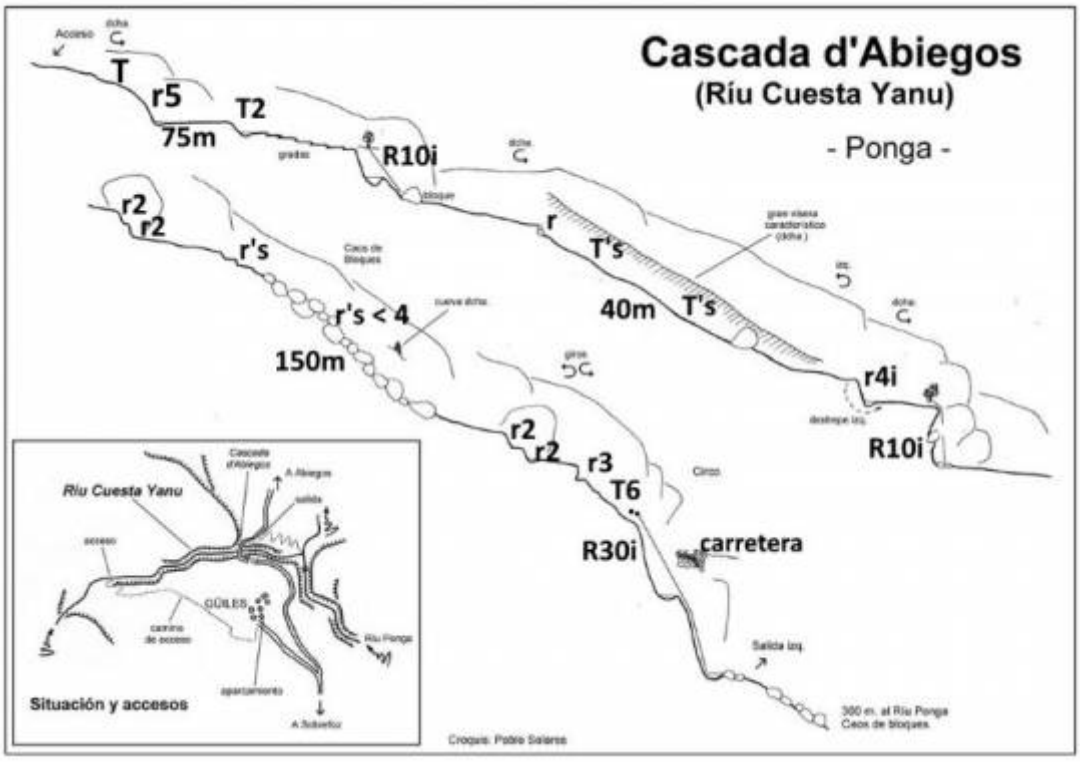

Return: (machine translated)
After the waterfall we turn left to go up to the road and the bridge. We will follow the road to return to the detour and the parking lot.
