Summary: (machine translated)
Magnificent descent after rains to catch the riverbed in all its splendor. A beech forest will receive us to make some beautiful rappels, in many cases from natural. Combinable with the lower part or any other of the Sangas area.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We must get to Sangas, in the valley of Soba.
By the N629 from Ramales de la Victoria (p.k. 67) we have the detour by the CA256 to Veguilla. From Collado de Asón also to Veguilla.
Once in Veguilla, at km. 10 there is a detour to Villar and Sangas on the CA663. After one kilometer, at the sharp right-hand bend, we will take the turn to Sangas. One kilometer later we will arrive at San Bartolomé, and here we turn right to Sangas.
We will cross the village and continue on a track that goes along the hill of the mountain, we will make some sharp left-right curves, we will continue making curves linked, after 300m we leave a track on the right, another 300m later we take the track on the right and go down to a farm, here we leave a track on the right that is the access to the lower part. Follow the track for about 200m to a stream, park here.

Approach: (machine translated)
We cross the stream and continue along the track, the next riverbed to cross is that of the Baulalastras stream. Soon the track ends and at the end we go south through the forest (we will look for a blue reference point), practically without a path, heading south, we will climb the hill to the top where we will find a track that we take to the left. We will walk along the track 500m to a path/track that heads north, it ends and we continue along the stream that leads us right to the first rappel, access to the ravine.

Tour: (machine translated)
Nice descent into the beech forest, open and well formed.

Return: (machine translated)
We arrive at the access road, we take it to the right until we reach the car.
