Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Riquet, it is a dry but very interesting canyon. A multitude of skills and rappels in a different environment, full of "slabs" that give the name to this canyon in the Sierra de Bernia. Perfect to combine with any other canyon in the area Fondo, Revoltes...
Avoid the central hours of summer.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Access Bcos Serra de Bernia
From Altea la Vella towards Callosa d'Ensarrià by the CV755.
Location Bcos Serra de Bernia
Around pk 19 we have the detour to the right to "Casitas de Riquet", we will go along this street towards the mountain without turning off.
When the chalets finish, we will be in some fields with the mountain range in front of us and the Barranc del Llosar watercourse. We will have a dirt road that goes into the right, which is the return. This is the place to park.
If we have two cars, with the access car we will go up the track for about 2 kms and after two sharp bends left-right, there is a dirt road on the right. We park here.

Approach: (machine translated)
Approximations Bcos Llosar, Fondo, Revoltes and Paret
With only one car we will have to go up the track until the mentioned curves and the track to the right, we will get into this track until the hut in ruins and from here to the right to look for the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
In this first part we have 3 natural rappels to end up reaching the 30m rappel in which we have two facilities, one lower (3m) from which we can better recover the ropes.
Another area with vegetation separates us from the final section of rappels, in this second area they are much more followed and many of them are skillful.

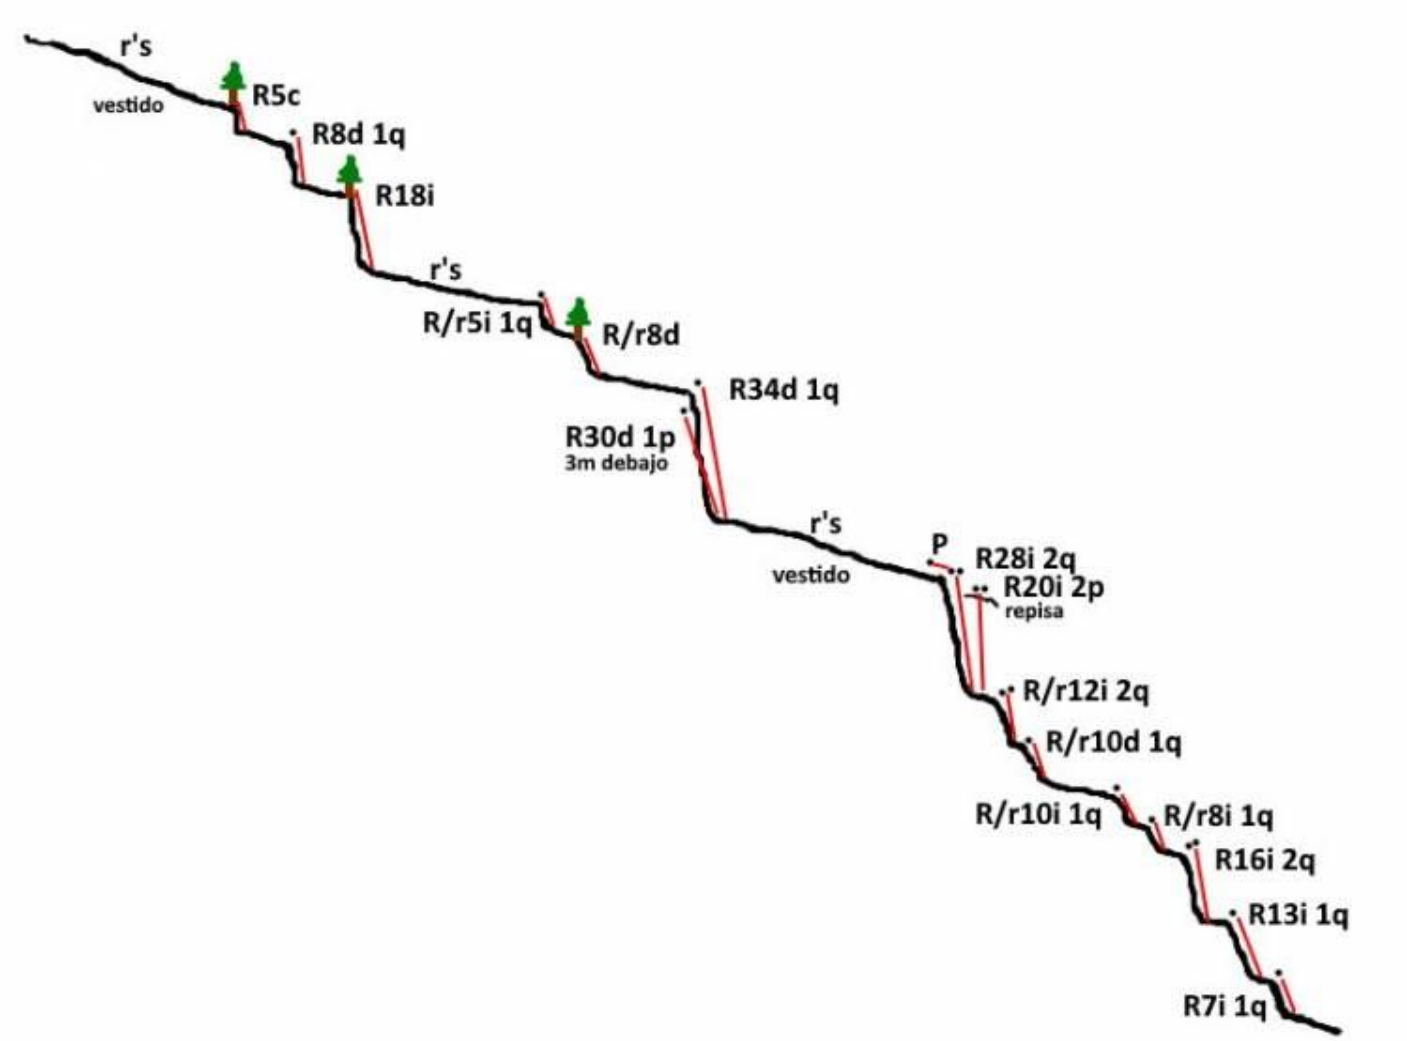

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel we will find some pins that we will surround looking for the right, soon a track on our right that takes us to the access track, where we park.
