Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
The first part of the route is quite dressed up, which detracts from the beauty of this spring canyon. The second part gains entity and improves our taste of mouth although quite a lot of people consider it as a collector's ravine.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Take the N260 to Sort; once there, turn onto the C13 toward Llavorsi, pass through it, and head toward Esterri d'Aneu. You can also take the C28 from Vielha (Vall d'Aran). In both cases, you'll arrive at La Guingueta d'Àneu.
In La Guingueta, you can park in the designated areas in town or head to the back, next to Hostal Orteu via Cami de Jou, and walk about 200 meters up to the intersection by the river; however, there is limited parking space up here, so be careful not to block anyone. This is where we'll leave the car for the return trip.
If we have two cars, this option doesn't really save us much time, since it's still nearly 30 minutes to the access parking lot. We'll head up toward Esterri, pass it by, continue along the C28, passing Valencia on one side, and soon reach the turnoff for Son and Jou on our left. We'll take this small road to Jou (9 km). At the entrance to the village, there's a parking area on the left, just before the GR signpost.

Approach: (machine translated)
From La Guingueta we will follow the GR or Cami de Jou to go up to the head of the trail. From Jou, likewise, by the GR, in this case downhill. About 600m from Jou there is a dam, this is the place to go down to the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
First part without great interest, quite dressed and with short rappels and skills. Little by little the canyon will approach us to the final vertical where the 3 most important and interesting rappels are concentrated.

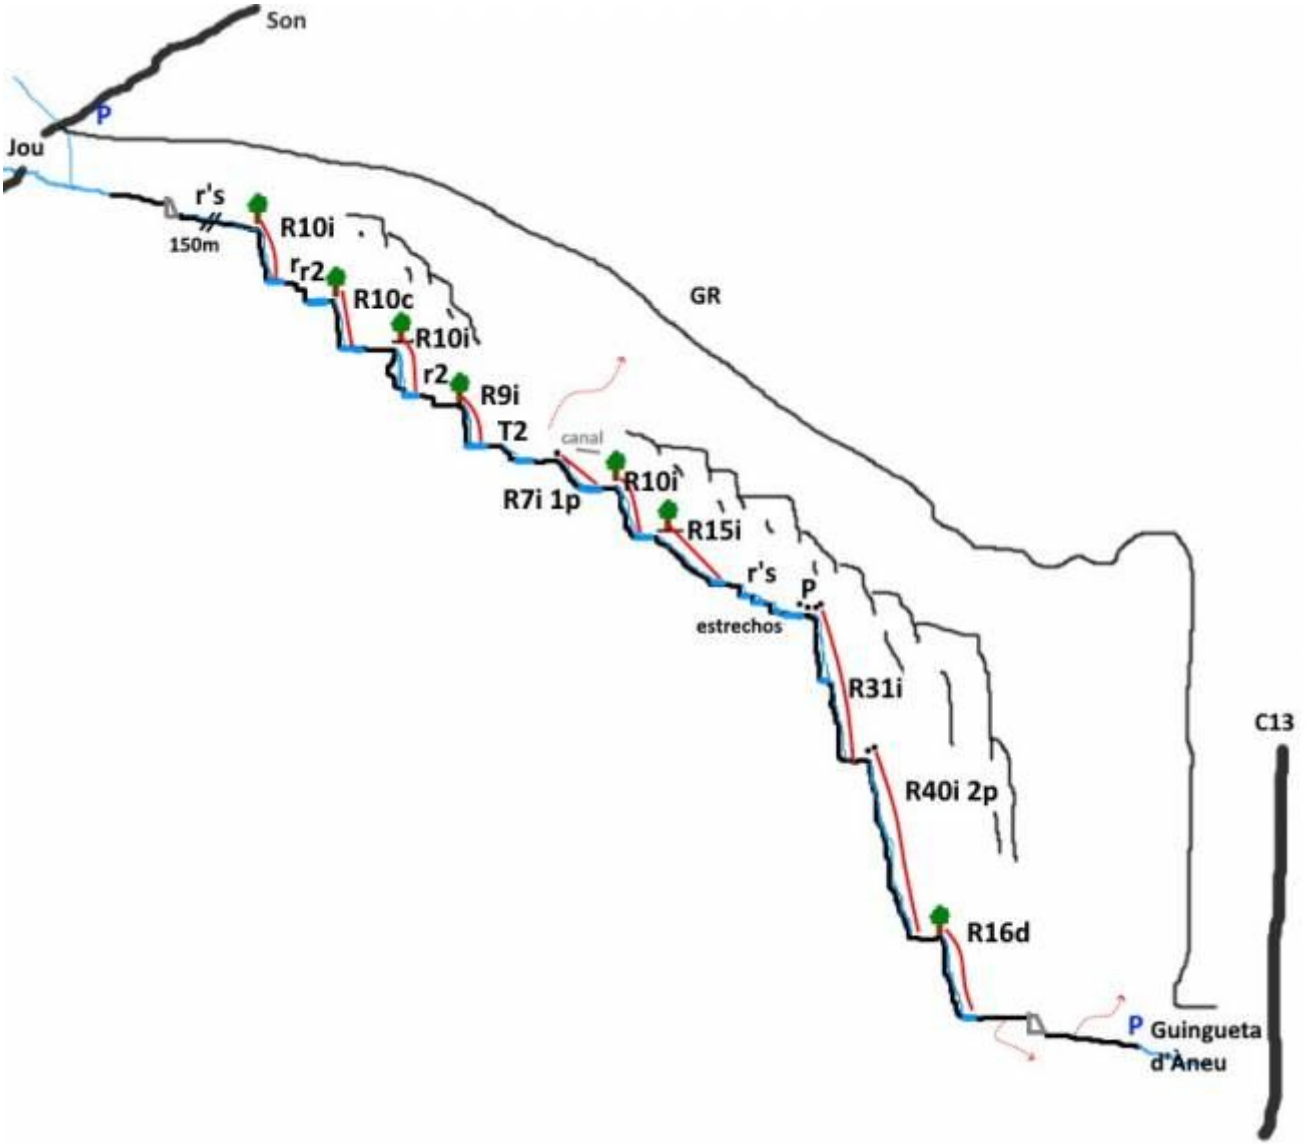

Return: (machine translated)
Just as we reach the plain, we leave the river, which is channeled before the village and soon we reach the road.
