Summary: (machine translated)
By toponymy it is the Barranc de Condonyes. Gully generally dry except during rainy periods, losing access path but with interesting formations. Little more than collecting

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We must be located on the C14 between Organyà and Seu d'Urgell.
Before leaving Organyà we will have the detour to Figols on the right, follow the road to Figols, cross the village towards Romanins. After Romanins follow the track that runs parallel to the stream until you reach the detour, in front of the houses of Codonyes, we will pass them to the source and park.
According to the old guidebooks you had to park in the Mas de la Serra but it seems that today you can not park there.

Approach: (machine translated)
For the path that goes up to the Mas de la Serra, we will have the option of following a path along the stream or another path a few meters above that leaves from the Mas, in both cases the path will be lost in sections. If we go along the stream, just before reaching the narrows (end of the ravine) we will go to the left to go up the slope to take the other path (it goes below the height of 100m) and now, without losing height, we go around the spur to then go down to the other side to the riverbed.

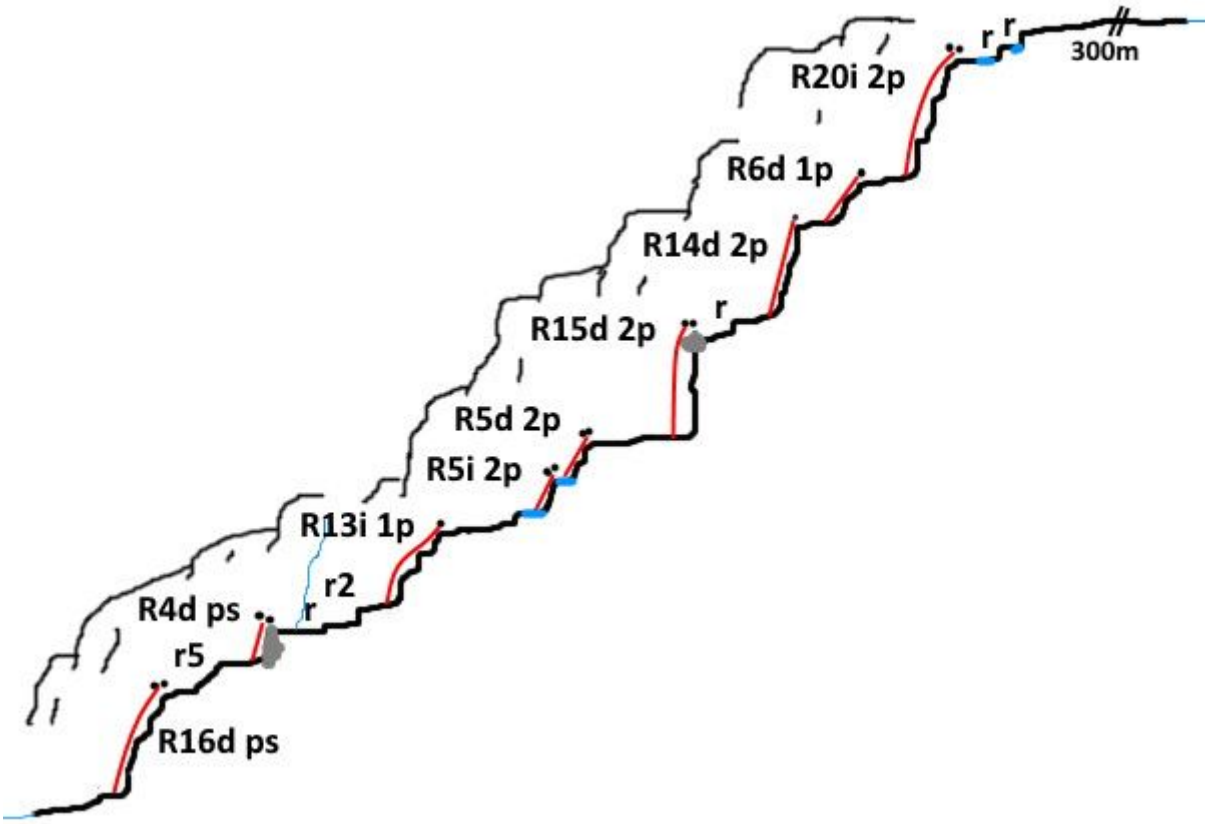

Tour:

Return: (machine translated)
Once the ravine opens, we will follow the same access road to the fountain.
