Summary: (machine translated)
A steep canyon carved in the green forests of Serra de Outes.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We will be located in Chacín.
Chacín ravines
We approach until Chacín, once here we leave a car in the chapel of San Paio (end of the ravine) by the AC3404 and the other at the beginning. For this we go to Gosende

Approach: (machine translated)
Ribeiriños and San Paio Banks
From the village of Gosende, we go down a road towards the meadows overlooking the valley, we have to look for a track that goes to the left (looking towards the valley) from which we will immediately see the river, which we will enter at the first point where it is possible.

Tour: (machine translated)
Our entry point will be an old mill, at 70 or 80m we will find the first rappel and from here we have a descent through lush forests, vertical, with lots of water ... impressive! When we reach the confluence with the San Paio we continue and do a couple more rappels.

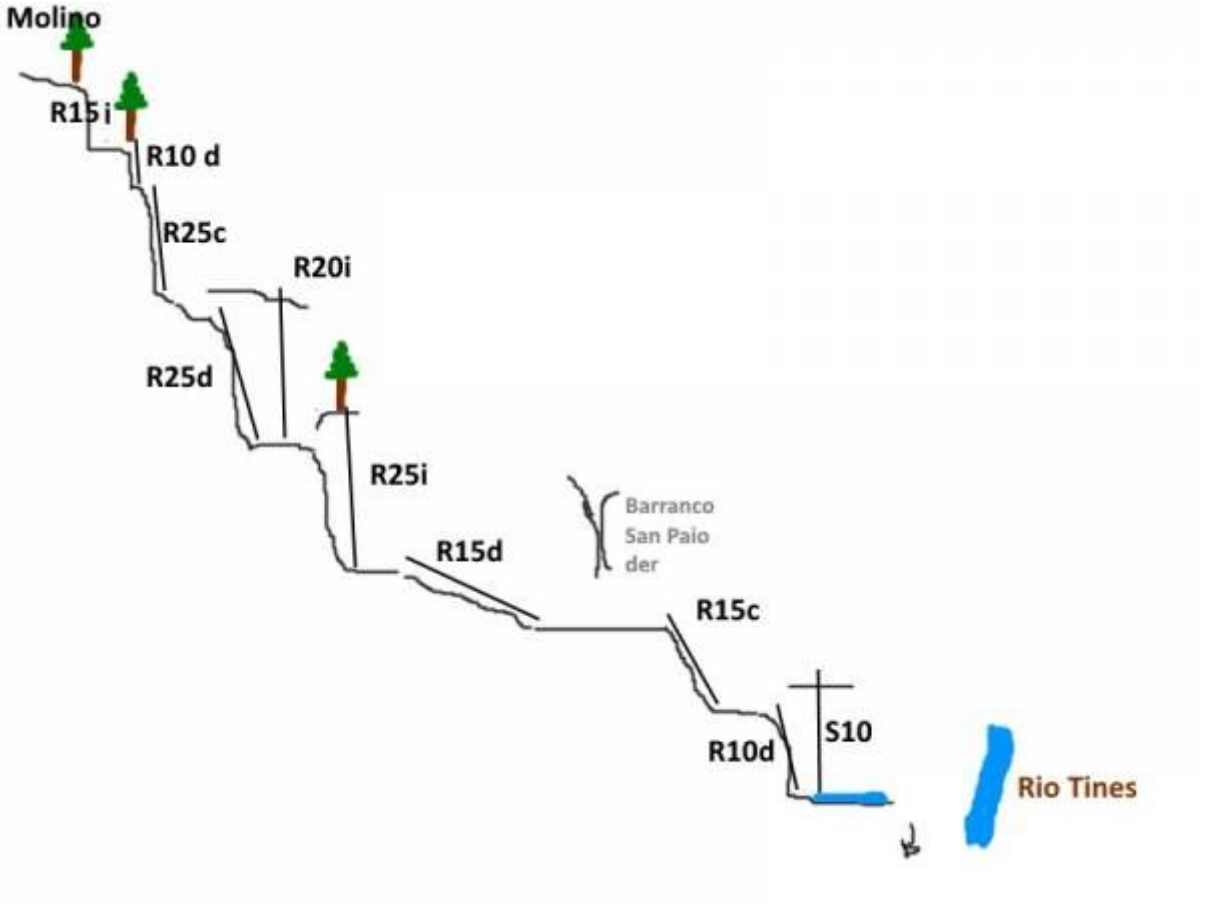

Return: (machine translated)
You can go up the hillside along a track through the vegetation, but it is best to continue along a path downstream to the chapel where you will leave the car.
