Summary: (machine translated)
Ravine located on the north face of the Serra de Sant Gervás, in a remote environment. The first part is not very interesting, in a strip of limestone, then a long stretch through the forest without much interest, until the second band of limestone, where it gains much interest. It is possible to find it with water after rains.
At the end of the ravine it is possible to link with the ravine of Fondo d'Adons. The return is long, quite hard up the mountain to find the path of the castle of Curan.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Take the N230 to Pont de Suert, then turn right onto the N260 towards Port de Viu.
After Port de Viu, almost at the p.k. 335 we have on the right the detour to Adons. We will follow this road for about 800m before turning right at Mas de Gras. From here we will follow the track in worse and worse condition until the Coll de Sant Roc d'Adons.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the pass there is a path, GR, which climbs a little south and then heads west towards the Tossal Gros, a kilometer and a half we will reach the Font de Fai and soon cross the channel Pubill, the beginning of the upper section.
If we follow the path to the next pass, there we will leave the GR to go north along a stream that leads to the end of the upper section and the beginning of the lower section, it is also useful as an escape after the upper section.
Another option to go to the lower part is to take the path that goes west from the pass where we left the car, it is the same path that crosses the ravine where the upper section ends.

Tour: (machine translated)
See moles

Return: (machine translated)
Before arriving at the Barranc Fondo d'Adons we will leave by some path (remains of trails) that go by the orographic left to avoid the waterfall of the main stream, once below this jump we will have to go up a dry tributary that is on the right bank of the Barranc Fondo d'Adons to reach the path that is above. From there we will only have to follow it eastward to the pass.
