Ropes: 2×100m, 2x60m

Summary: (machine translated)
It’s actually a fairly ordinary canyon in the Bernese Oberland, but getting there is such a challenging alpine trek that the journey alone is an adventure in itself. The canyon follows a crevice and is sometimes less than 1 meter wide.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
The catchment area is small, but many avalanches can come down there, so you should wait until late summer before hiking there.

Access: (machine translated)
Park at Mürvorsess in the Urbachtal for the southern approach route. For the northern route via Schellibach, a shuttle is required.

Approach: (machine translated)
Access is the most challenging part of this route. The first ascent was made via the Äugstgumm, and from there, climbers rappelled more than 400 meters to reach the canyon. In 2024, bolts were placed on the Schellibach, and climbers then traversed steeply across the wall.

Tour: (machine translated)
A deep, steep canyon that has a 100-meter drop at its exit. Certainly one of the most challenging alpine routes in Switzerland.

Awesome climb—the access is definitely harder than the canyon itself. We accessed the climb from the south. We followed the stream, rappelled down at Äugstgumm, and climbed the high step right next to P.1816 in 20m + 100m + 80m. Immediately afterward, we first downclimbed orographically to the right and crossed the slabs back to the large “Lindi” ledge. To reach the stream, head left toward the rock face, rappel 100m down the grassy slope, and then enter the canyon with 50m + 80m. (machine translated)

Automatisch importiert von Schlucht.ch für Canyon Teifflouwi, Wasserstand: "angenehm" Verankerungen: "gut" Haben den Schellibach bis aufs Band gemacht und sind dann rüber zur Teiflaui traversiert. Der letzte Abseiler der Teiflaui haben wir in ca. 60/50 unterteilt. Für Teiflaui reichen nun 65m Seile.
