Summary: (machine translated)
A short, vertical canyon with very cold spring water.

The Rio Barman is a short and striking canyon in the Reschental Valley. Rio Barman is better known as Fontanone Barman and is a major tourist attraction in Val Resia. The water flows from an underground cave, and after 200 meters, the “Fontanone Barman” waterfall plunges into the depth. There is a very beautiful view from the bottom of the canyon, where you can see the waterfalls in all their majesty. The waterfalls are stunning and surrounded by green moss. To visit the canyon, a very low water level is essential; this is only possible after dry spells or in winter.

Access: (machine translated)
In the Kanaltal valley, in the village of Resiutta, turn into the Resia Valley. It’s a 13-minute drive and about 10 km to the small village of Lischiazze; shortly after that (L), you’ll come to the large parking lot (20 cars) for the Fontanone Barman.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking lot, take the marked Trail 703. Do not cross the stream; instead, continue on Trail 762—a steep, 200-meter elevation gain—up through the forest on switchbacks. Be careful in some places when finding your way, but the trail is marked throughout. At the top, where the trail levels off at about 870 meters above sea level, turn left at the cairn at the intersection. Follow the path—which includes some wooden steps and is marked intermittently—and you should be able to find the trail.

Tour: (machine translated)
The anchors and chains on this route are old but still in relatively good condition. It’s still a good idea to bring a drill, though.

C 28m: 2 x bolts with chains, large boulder, (L)
In the “Pool” section (L), there’s a bolt for belaying to reach the next belay station.
C 25m: 2 x bolts with chains (L)
C 32m: 2 x bolts with chains (R)
C 20m: 2 x bolts with chains (L)
C 20m: 2 x bolts with chains (R), slightly below that 2 x single bolts

Return: (machine translated)
Turn left 100 meters past the last pool; you can't miss the tourist trail. It's a 10-minute walk back to the car.

We hiked through the canyon today when the water level was extremely low; normally there’s a lot more water in the summer. Only the second rappel anchor needs to be replaced; otherwise, the rest of the chain anchors are in good condition. (machine translated)
