This section of the stream is less steep; the route begins with a narrow downhill trail that starts at Vogna di Sotto (25 min.). The first part involves walking along the riverbed, with a few tributaries plunging down from the walls carved out by the Vogna, offering interesting views; then you reach the first waterfall at a left turn, and from here on, the route is unexplored. There are certainly no large waterfalls; the first one is likely also the highest. The stream flows 100–200 m below the road, and the slopes are very steep—if not vertical in some places. Finding escape routes is certainly challenging, though there are many places to take shelter from high water. The flow is consistently high; if you plan to descend it, bring a drill and hardware.
