Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Open forest canyon with a beautiful waterfall and a lot of tedious block chaos

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From Wildalpen follow the B64 towards Hieflau, after passing through a tunnel park in the area of a forest road branching off to the left.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow the forest road to its exit, then climb impassably and laboriously over an overgrown blow in a southwesterly direction. Where the valley narrows, the path becomes better and easier to find. One should already check the feasibility of the big waterfall during the ascent. Above the steep zone climb in as you wish.

Tour: (machine translated)
Open forest canyon, anchors are sometimes difficult to find. The stream has a relatively large catchment area and quickly carries a lot of water after rainfall. At the big waterfall in 2002 had to rappel through the stream, but this point can be bypassed to the right. Below the large waterfall, the stream falls over large boulders to the valley - usually there were several anchors per break.

Return: (machine translated)
Follow the road back to the parking lot.
