Gear:
Ropes: 2x 50m

Summary: (machine translated)
Short rappel with few running sections with the highlight of the beautiful approx. 45 meter high stepped rappel

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Relatively little water and therefore easy to walk on after rain

Access: (machine translated)
In Bellinzona, park on the far side of the railroad tracks. There are a few 24-hour parking spaces, the remaining parking spaces have a time limit of 1-2 hours.
Or you can also get there by public transport. Bellinzona train station is right next to the canyon.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow the official hiking trails to the access bridge

Tour: (machine translated)
Abseiling points (as of 2024) equipped where necessary. The high abseiling point in particular is equipped redundantly.
However, natural anchoring options must be used in many places.

Return: (machine translated)
Several exit options. It is best to turn left at the small stone bridge to the climbing garden and continue along the road back to the station.

Don't do it, go to the movies, play miniature golf or count blades of grass, it's all better. (machine translated)

No slings on the trees. There is currently a dead sow on the 2nd rappel. The first part is nice. After the long rappel quite a lot of rubble. The last one is quite nice again. (machine translated)

Deflection hook at c45 is damaged. An additional anchor has been placed at c45 so that it is now divided into c38 + c7. Take care here when pulling off the ropes! (machine translated)
