Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Izpiña by the irrigation that waters it, it is a generally dry ravine or with a trickle, except after rains. Two rappels from natural up to 26m to save the two cuts, then a good area of pools, skills and bathtubs to the return path and a nice environment in which to take a good walk. It is not a canyon with entity as to consider going alone to do it.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
On the NA178 towards Ochagavía, almost at k.p. 31 we have Gallués. 31 we have Gallués.
We go towards Izal, after 3 km we have on the right the track that goes up to the hermitage of Ntra Sra de Arburúa, we continue to the village, where we can park the car back or if we only have one vehicle.
At the end of the village there is a track that goes up to the cross of Aldu, we will climb it to the upper hill where there is room to park.

Approach: (machine translated)
If we have parked below we must go up the track to the pass.
After the pass we have a fork of tracks, we will go to the west, to the left, if we take the right we will go to the Salto de Aldu. We will overcome a small pass and descend to the Izpiña riverbed, over the Rincón de Atagaitza.

Tour: (machine translated)
Two small cirques to descend and then water hiking until we see a path on our left that goes down to the village.

Return: (machine translated)
Along the path on the left bank, which becomes a track to the village.
