Summary: (machine translated)
Adventure canyon, installations in trees, very little frequented and almost always with water. Better to do in spring to enjoy its final waterfalls. The first part of the canyon and how dressed it is in much of the route, make it tarnish what could be a great canyon.

Access: (machine translated)
By the N260 to Sort, from here we will have to go up to the hamlet of Pujalt.
If we leave by the C13 towards Llavorsí, just at the exit of Sort we have the detour to the left at the traffic circle towards Llesui by the LV5223. We will go 3kms until the Olp/Pujalt detour on the left. Here we take the LV5224 and go up to Olp where we leave the village on the left and the detour to Castellviny. We continue another 3 kms and in a right curve from which we see Pujalt in front, we will have the PR of Castellviny on our left and a few meters ahead the PR to Pujalt. We park.
If we get to Sort from the south we may be interested in taking, just at the entrance of the village, the detour to the left to Enviny by the LV5222. We will go up leaving first Montardit and then Enviny to continue to Pujalt. We cross this pretty village with magnificent views over the Pallars and soon in a somewhat sharp right curve we cross our river. 600m later we arrive at the curve where we will have to park, in this case on the left.

Approach: (machine translated)
By the PR to Pujalt in 10min, you can't miss it.

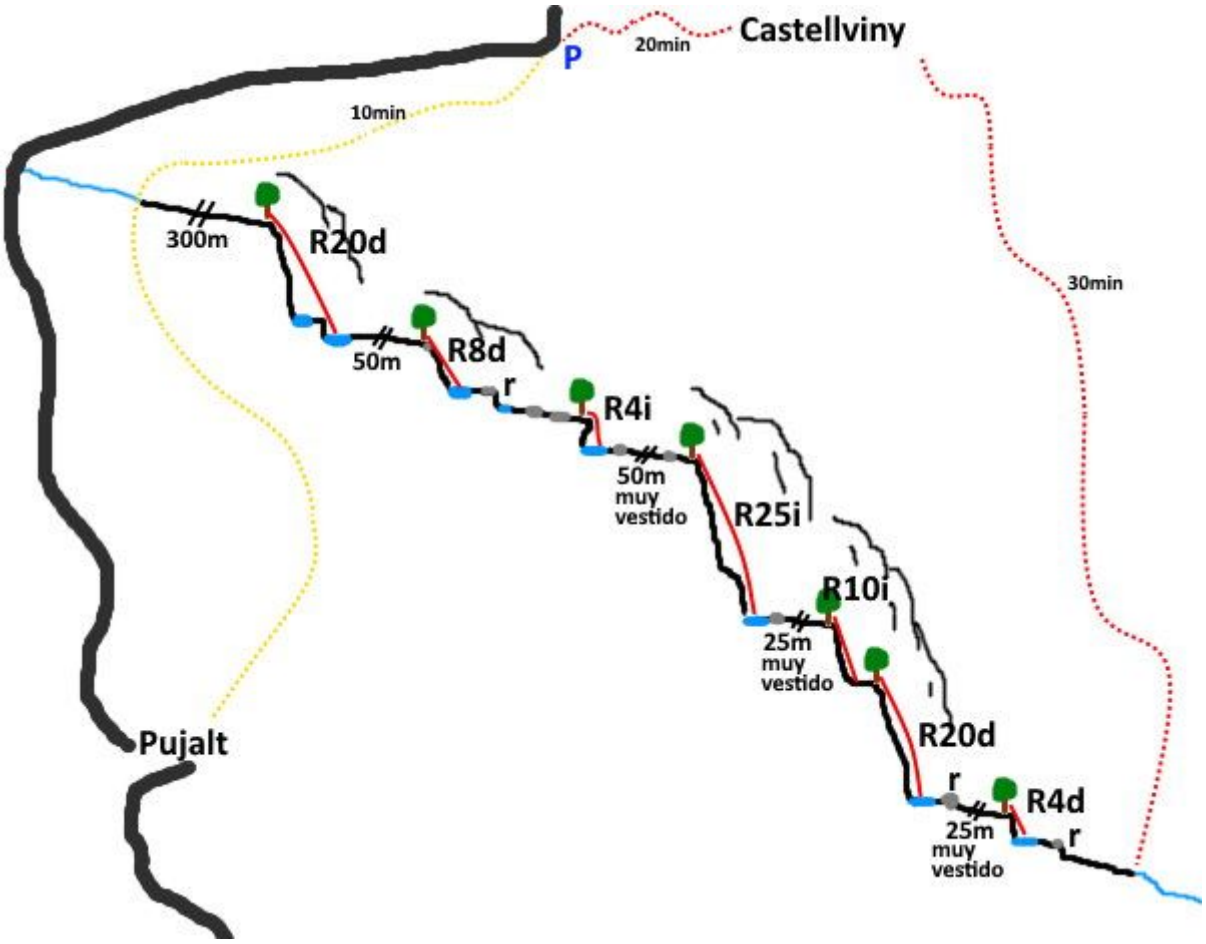

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part quite dressed with a 20m rappel to get closer to the vertical. From here it is more and more dressed but the canyon gains entity and we find 3 long rappels almost chained.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel we will find a milestone on our left that will lead us to the track that goes to Castellviny and from there by the PR that goes to Pujalt. It will give to the road just in the curve.
