Summary: (machine translated)
rappel canyon

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From Nassereith, south of the Fernpass after the tunnel drive in the direction of Innsbruck. The hairpin bends up to Holzleiten (8.5 km from the tunnel). Here turn off the main road 189,, through Holzleiten northwards to Weisland and further in the direction of Aschland. Between both villages the road crosses the brook. Park approx. 50 m before the bridge on the right side of the road.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking lot (1150 m a.s.l.) a forest road leads to the Marienbergalm. At the first junction (1410 m a.s.l.) follow the right flat or gently sloping forest road to the Holzerhütte (1390 m a.s.l.).

Tour: (machine translated)
Many smaller rappels, downclimbs, no jumps or slides

Return: (machine translated)
After the last zig-zag rappel, which can be bypassed on the left by a small slip, turn right beyond clear tracks onto a small path that leads down to the forest road and the car.

We ascended via the hiking trail on the orographic left. This time, the entry point to the stream was marked with blue paint on a tree. All the belay stations were in good condition except for the second-to-last one. There, we rappelled down from a tree that was wedged in place because the ring was missing. (machine translated)

Nice little tour. Stands all in order. Can agree with the previous statement with belay number 4. If the next group were to tie in a piece of remaining rope (approx. 2-3m) the problem would be solved. (machine translated)

On access via the forest road, the entry was easy to find if you keep right at the first junction behind the cow gate. The holds were all good, some new chain anchors were drilled in. Only at abseil point no. 4 was the anchor difficult to reach. Otherwise a beautiful canyon with lots of downclimbing and a few nice rappels. (machine translated)

Access via forest road to the hunting lodge, easy to find. At the penultimate abseiling point (no. 2) the rock is undercut. Otherwise everything is in order, very well equipped. (machine translated)

Stands all in order so far. The entry is not so easy to find. We entered from further up through a dry streambed behind the slide brake (machine translated)

Description fits, abseil stands all okay, only the hunting lodge used as an entry marker can be seen poorly or late (machine translated)
