Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Unknown canyon but very nice in spring with good flows. Long and complicated access and return, as well as the little entity of the ravine makes that almost nobody travels it and it has remained as something of collectionism

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
On the N260 going up from La Pobla de Segur towards Sort, just before reaching Gerri de la Sal at pk 295.
We will take the detour to the right towards Baen, we will continue along this small road passing through Baen, Buseu leaving the ruins of Recallers on one side, just there there is a left curve with parking space on the right.

Approach: (machine translated)
Below us an old track heading NE that allows us to go along the edge of some fields to go to a somewhat lost path. This path will take us towards NE until about 250m from Bco Sant Sebastià, next to some small meadows.

Tour: (machine translated)
Two stretches of very nice narrows with water, in the middle a walking area with forest but without difficulty.

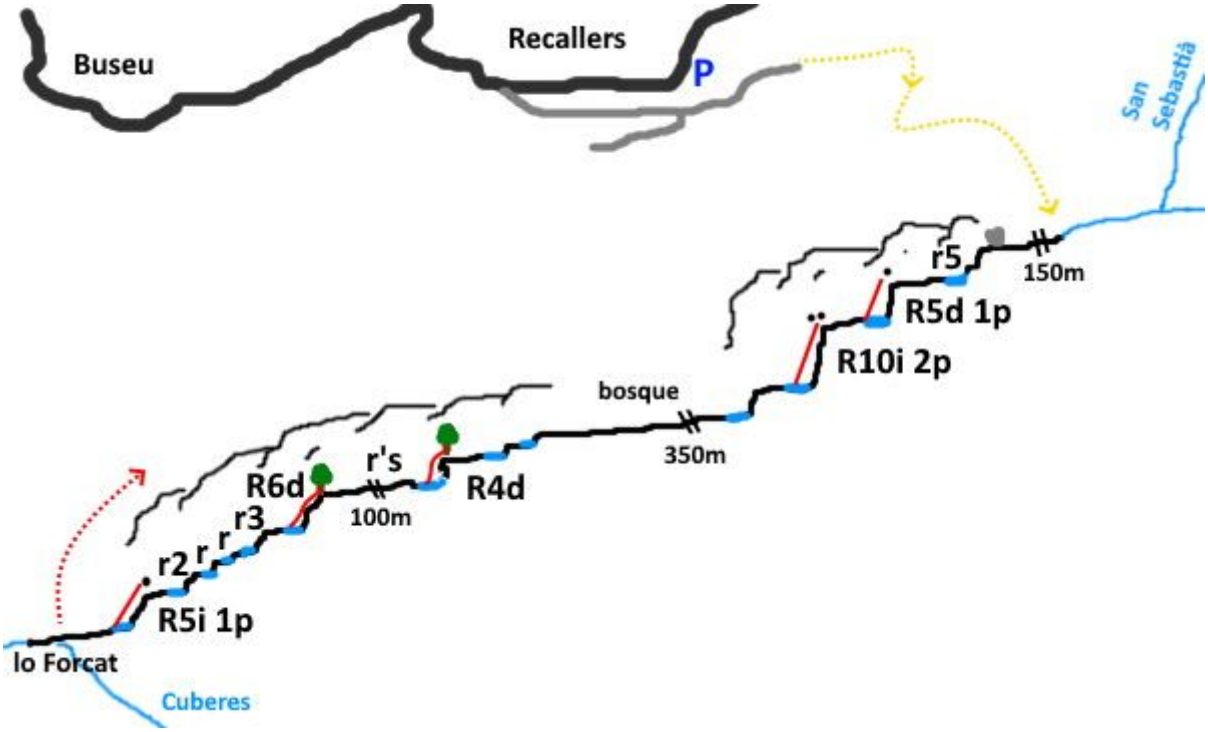

Return: (machine translated)
Arriving at Lo Forcat, confluence on the left with Cuberes, we will leave to the right by a path that goes uphill and runs along the river. After passing through a cave, we will find a channel through which we will climb (hard climb) to the ridge or spur. Once there we will see Recallers, we will only have to go to its ruins and from there to the road.
