"Having descended the San Girolamo ditch yesterday, I report that the first part is overgrown with fallen trees that greatly slow the progression, non-existent weapons perhaps collapsed with the trees. The second part, where the more vertical part begins, the weapons are in a very bad state: natural on trees that are now dry and close to falling or hardware store chains tied with old lanyards. Route from my point of view not recommended for safety reasons, too bad because the final rappel is spectacular" Giorgio Casaro in February 2026 (machine translated)
