Summary: (machine translated)
This canyon is generally dry except after heavy rains when it gains a lot of interest. Very close to Riglos so we can combine climbing, ferratas and canyoning in the same day.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We must arrive to Salinas de Jaca. From Puente de la Reina or from Huesca on the A132.
Just at the bridge over the river Asabón, pk 51. We will find a track that climbs towards the mountain next to the stream, after 500m it turns sharply to the right, here we park.

Approach: (machine translated)
In the same curve we will find a milestone that indicates the uphill trail. It crosses the stream and heading south-east into the forest to save the walls. At the height of these, the path turns to the west and will gradually gain altitude has above the walls. Arrived at 1000m of altitude we will have to be attentive to a milestone that marks the descent to the right towards the stream.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part with lots of vegetation and the first 30m rappel. The second part is much more vertical and closed with its impressive final abseil of 75m divided in 45 + 30m.

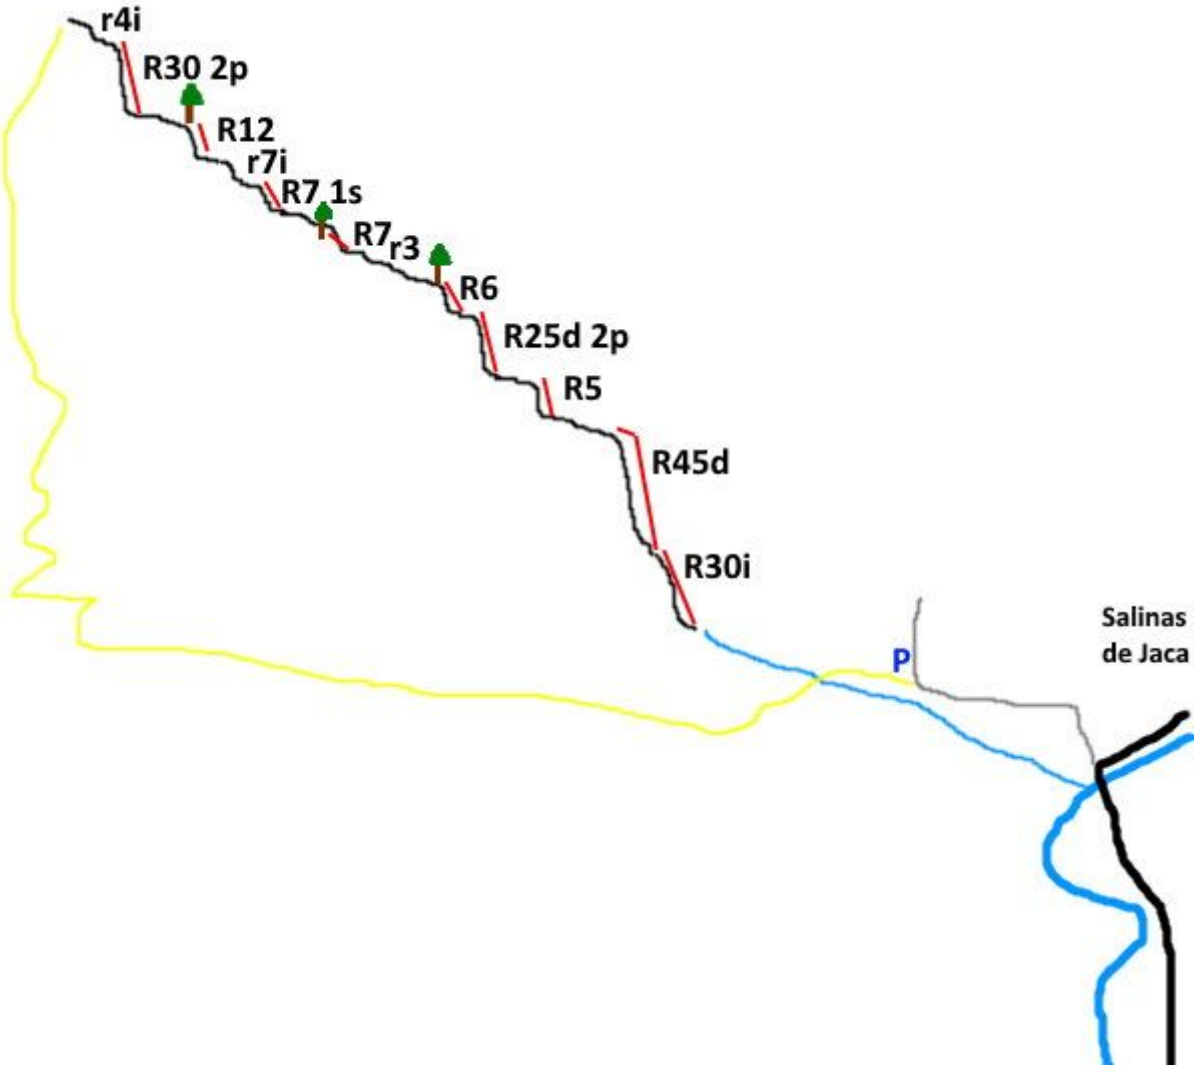

Return: (machine translated)
At the base of the last vertical we will have the option to go by trail to the right to the uphill trail or continue along the creek.

Coordinates:
Canyon Start 42.4098 -0.7885
