Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Simple ravine in a peculiar site. Singular environment and possibility of combination of vehicles, although not necessary.
Generally we will find it dry, except in the rainy season, moment in which we will have to be extremely cautious with the fall of stones.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We are located in Daroca de Rioja on the LR341.
If we want to make a combination (not necessary) we can leave the return car in the village.
With the access car (one car, recommended), we leave towards Hornos de Moncalvillo, in the p.k. 6,4 we have a detour to the left by an asphalted track that goes up to the Serradero peak. There is a parking area

Approach: (machine translated)
We will leave towards the east, following the mountain range towards Moncalvillo. A kilometer after starting to walk, the track heads north, makes a right turn and leaves a track on the left that heads north along the ridge. After the turn, 60m later we have a kind of track on the left that goes into the Colorado valley, we get in here and soon begins the descent.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first rappel that can be climbed (better to belay) to enter the Colorado. Then a walking area to reach the next two natural rappels. We will continue to go to the R6 and soon to the beautiful R18 at the end. We will only have to walk between walls at the bottom of the canyon.

Return: (machine translated)
When the ravine opens up, we will find a losing path on the right that goes uphill to the south and then head east towards the Neveras path. We will be able to return by there or by the track that goes up by the cordal. In both options we will arrive at the access track, which we will take to the right towards our vehicle.
