Ropes: 2x35m

Summary: (machine translated)
South-facing, short and largely open, hardly any slide and/or jump options.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From the orographic left bank of Kufstein (train station), take the L37 to Vorderthiersee (a good 6 km). Continue on the L37 to Landl (7.5 km). Turn left here, over the Thierseer Ache and 5.2 km up to Riedenberg. Park your car here (residents complain, not on the turning area at the exit of the passable road. Perhaps better at the Gasthaus Wastler - if open, ask in advance and announce a stop for refreshments after the tour).
Access to Landl also via Schliersee, Bayrischzell.

Approach: (machine translated)
We take the dirt road across the meadows in a southwesterly direction. The path bends successively to the north and we reach a forest road. On this 150m to the left we come to the bridge over the Karnertalbach. Entry above the bridge on the orographic right or left side.

Tour: (machine translated)
First under the bridge, then alternate walking passages and easy rappel (about 11 - 13). At the end, continue downhill in the stream until the banks flatten out and an exit trail becomes visible on the left.
It is also possible to go further. A wide waterfall follows, which is rappelled down at the beginning or left of the tree. Then follows a 32m waterfall from the tree in the middle of the watercourse and finally a 10m rappel to the left of the tree. Exit after walking passages in the stream left up to the forest path.

Return: (machine translated)
The exit track leads to a dirt road that brings us back to the car.

A very unspectacular, relatively open but definitely beautiful canyon. All anchors are in place and in good condition. In some sections, you rappel down trees; the slings installed there appear relatively new and are in good condition. A series of short but rewarding rappels and a few small slides. A 20-meter rope is sufficient. If necessary, you can almost always exit to the side, so this route is possible even in bad weather and is also suitable for beginners and children. For the return trip, as indicated in the Tyrolean Canyoning Guide, we exited to the left 50 meters after the last rappel—but that was too early. The better return route is a bit further on.
