Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Collector canyon, without large flows except in spring, small fattened areas and some interesting rappel. The best, the environment, the high part of the Pallars, with all its history, the roads of the republic, the lush forests,...

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We must be located in the Alt Pallars, where we will arrive by the C28 from Vielha or by the C13 on the side of Sort and Llavorsí.
We will arrive at Esterri d'Àneu, enter the village and take the road that goes up the Noguera towards Isil. Nice winding road in this lush, deep and wet valley of the Pyrenees. We will pass these small villages of slate and stone, so well preserved, to reach Alós d'Isil, the last village before the end of the conventional road. From here, an old track, now asphalted, where we will have to maneuver carefully if another vehicle comes in front, and that was a place of escape not so many years ago. Today, well remembered with the signs of the "Cami de la Llibertat".
A little more than 2kms after leaving Alós we will find a sign on our left of the parq de l'Alt Pirineu and a few meters further on a track on the right, with the Pina huts in front of us, on the slope of the imposing mountains that separate us from the French side, just across the river Salat and the village of Salau.
We will go down the track to the bridge over the Noguera and park where we do not disturb.

Approach: (machine translated)
We will leave by the track, then trail, which goes up to the Borda and then the path that goes along the Comamala gorge. After a kilometer and a half from the bridge, at about 1650m altitude, we will leave the main trail and we will go, almost without path, in a N-NW direction, to go to find our ravine. There are some milestones to follow to the riverbed

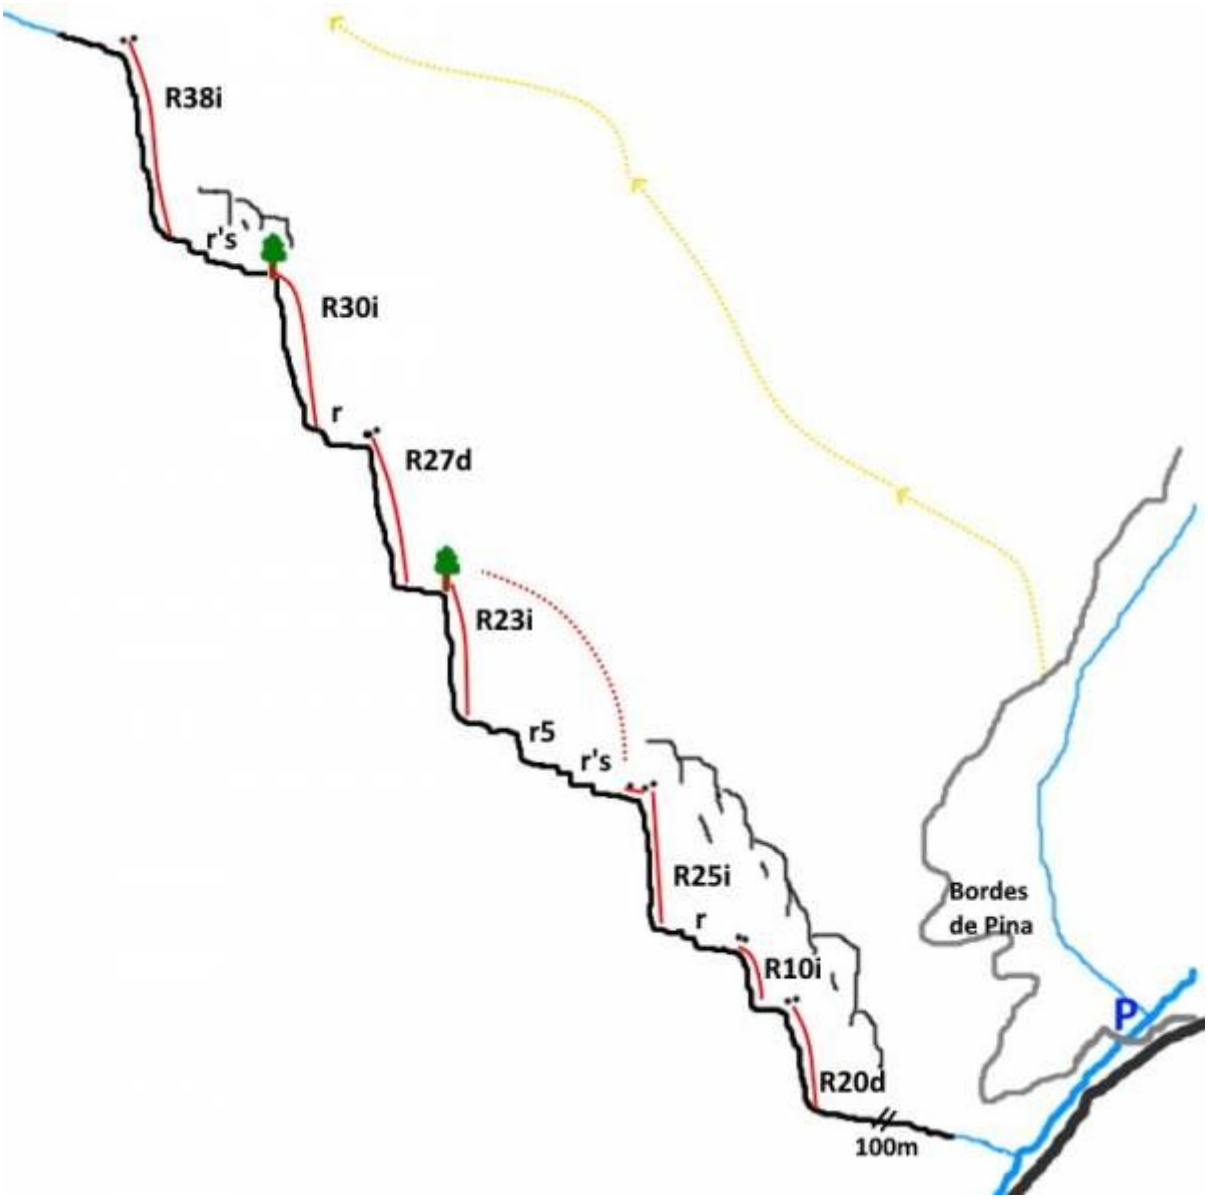

Tour: (machine translated)
Alpine canyon, quite open except for small sections, without water, or almost, in summer and some interesting rappel.

Return: (machine translated)
Once we reach the Noguera river, we will go along its left bank until we reach the bridge.
