Summary: (machine translated)
Dry rappel canyon

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From Bierge, on the southern edge of the Sierra de Guara, head towards Rodellar. After 9.7 km, we reach a sign on the right of the road that indicates Barranco Fondo. Here we turn right onto a dirt road. About 700 m further on, we reach a plateau with a great view, where we park the car.

Approach: (machine translated)
The canyon begins on the ledge below the area where we left the car. In order to reach this ledge, we go without a path along the edge of the slope on the left (direction NE) slightly downhill until we can turn right onto the said ledge. On this ledge now again in southern direction. The first two chutes that now descend on the left are branches of Barranco Estrecho, the next chute is Barranco Fontaneta. The terrain is confusing, so some sense of orientation and tracking is required. Both canyons flow into the Rio Isuala (at the beginning of the Balcés Estrechos). We now go to the entry of the Fontaneta.

Tour: (machine translated)
5 rappel. At the bottom the canyon narrows. Also suitable for beginners.

Return: (machine translated)
We reach the Rio Isuala (Balcés - exit of the Oscuros, beginning of the Estrechos de Balcés). Here we take, after about 30 m upstream the Rio Isuala. left up the path that one also climbs after the conclusion of the Balcés Oscuros in a northerly direction. We come to the dirt road and follow it to the left to the car.
Also through the Bco. Estrecho you can go back up to the starting point on the ramp. To do this, turn left at the confluence of the two canyons and do not go out through Tranco Las Olas to Rio Isuala.

Automatisch importiert von Descente-Canyon.com für Canyon Fontaneta Non parcouru car introuvable malgré: la topo, la carte, une attention particulière pour ne pas rater la sente qui part à droite ! Plusieurs topo parlent du 4eme impluvium, mais nous n'avons pas pu poursuivre la sente. Elle disparaît et malgré nos recherches, seules des portions probablement dégagées par les chèvres nous entouraient sans mener nul part. Nous avons abandonné au bout de 1h45 de recherche !
