Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Mountain ravine, with a lot of vegetation and no water in summer. Its approach, always long and difficult, becomes dangerous in winter.
Actually the campaniles creek is the next one, but it is not as well formed as this one.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
By the N330 from Jaca towards France. We will go up towards the Pto de Somport until we reach Canfranc village (not station) and just at the exit a bridge over the Aragon river. We cross it and park

Approach: (machine translated)
Along the IP valley route to take the PR28 towards the Collarada. After just over an hour we will leave the trail and continue without losing altitude on a poorly defined path that heads south.
We will follow this path until we are again above Canfranc, when we see a fairy chimney we will know that we are in our ravine.

Tour: (machine translated)
Wild descent, with a lot of cliffs, vegetation and uninteresting areas. Very spectacular in its first section in which we will descend 100m chaining rappels.

Return: (machine translated)
Along the railway track to the left towards the halt. After it we have a path that goes down to Canfranc, when we get almost to the bottom we must follow the river going up the pylons until we reach the car.

Coordinates:
Canyon Start 42.7165 -0.5169
