Summary: (machine translated)
Alpine canyon under the lagoon, open, aquatic and with long and steep rappels. Ideal for late spring or summer, at other times its cold waters and the amount of flow can complicate it. The good thing is that you can escape almost at any time.
Opened a few years ago by Cabres de Muntanya, 16 rappels distributed in two parts, the upper one with 6 rappels, really in two waterfalls and the other 11 practically consecutive in the second part, with a couple of grooved rappels, where we can feel the force of the water or take advantage of the facilities outside the active. Most of the rappels have facilities on both sides to avoid the assets.

Access: (machine translated)
Take the N260 to Castejón de Sos and take the A139 towards Benasque.
We will pass Benasque and continue north towards Baños and Hospital de Benasque. At the height of the Baños de Benasque we take this detour to the right and go down to the Plan de Turpi, cross the Ésera and at the first left fork there is a track to the right towards the refuge and the bridge of Cregüeña, we go along this road to the bridge and park.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking area there is a path on the orographic right of the river, this marked path will take us to the ibón de Cregüeña, a route very frequented by hikers and tourists in summer. By this pleasant climb through the forest we will arrive soon, in about 30 minutes without getting too crowded until almost 1700m altitude, where we will see a small path that leads to the river. This is the access to the second part.
Continuing along the path another 20min we will see a beautiful waterfall, quite vertical, that we will overcome, we will be almost at 1800m altitude, site to access the ravine by its first part.

It should be noted that the sketch follows the original topography in which only one side of each rappel is marked, but most of them are duplicated and many of them can even be avoided by leaving the riverbed.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel, we can follow the riverbed to the bridge or go to the right on the trail and descend the same way we came up.
