Summary: (machine translated)
rappel canyon

Hydrology: (machine translated)
A catchment area of less than 1 km², which should be navigated when the snow melts in order to benefit from a good flow.
You should try it with water, otherwise it makes little sense. The upper part seems to be interesting.

Access: (machine translated)
Leave the A3 highway at the Flums exit (exit 49). At the traffic circle, drive 2.5 km in the direction of Sargans and turn left in the hamlet of Halbmil. Park 150 m further on.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking lot, take the hiking trail that climbs quite steeply (160 m difference in altitude) and meets the path. Continue towards the canyon through the fields and keep close to the edge of the forest so as not to damage the grass! Take the path into the water above the large waterfall.

Tour: (machine translated)
A C75, 20 m RG line to a 2-point RG belay, then a 60 m rappel. Another C20 and you're done! If the current is strong, the 60 m rappel takes place behind the edge of the current, then you can descend on the right bank of the river far away from the water.

There is a children's hut at the foot of the C75! And a whole bunch of cyclists, who look dangerous, avoid the C20.

Return: (machine translated)
Leave the right bank of the river and walk through the forest to the path that leads back to the parking lot.
