It has been raining for almost a week now. The water level of Prosito South was too much at the lecture, but doable today. We chose the alternative entry and got in at about 1000hm. The orographic path to the right is easy to follow, although not always easy to find. At the bottom, safely take the loop around the outside. The steeper path to "shorten" on the swiss topographic view is more of a game trail than a path. The orographic path on the left is definitely more exposed and more difficult to walk! We had a 2h ascent. The canyon was slippery to walk. But the anchors were easy to reach. And it was mostly grippy there. The slippery walking made some downclimbs difficult. (traducción alternativa)

Upper entry chosen. The orographic access on the left is not recommended: longer, difficult and full of ticks ... Very beautiful in the canyon at the top, very slippery and green at the bottom. (traducción alternativa)

Start at an alternative start at 970m. Open canyon with many abseils and few walking passages. The upper part in particular is worthwhile... at some point at the bottom you have had enough (or is it just me?) and are happy to arrive in the village. Exit possible earlier. The two of us had a 6-hour drive (traducción alternativa)
