Resumen: (traducción alternativa)
Canyon in an Alpine Setting

Hidrología: (traducción alternativa)
A canyon with little water. The deeply incised parts do not allow for a large flow of water.

Acceso: (traducción alternativa)
From Sallanches, take the road to Sainte-Anne (heading east) and then to Lintre (parking lot and hiking trail signs, elevation 1,020 m). We'll leave the cars here. Note: If you have an SUV, you're allowed to drive as far as the La Flée bridge, except between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. from June 15 through August 31.

Acceso: (traducción alternativa)
Follow the trail toward the "Pont de la Flée" bridge, then continue along the trail toward "Pierre Fendue." There, follow the marked GR hiking trail (Tour du Pays du Mont-Blanc) on your right until you reach the bridge spanning the "Torrent des Fours" stream. From the bridge, you can take the C100. Cross a second stream (which may be dry) and then leave the GR to follow a small, clearly visible trail toward Combe des Fours (some partially faded markings and a few sections secured with ropes).

Recorrido: (traducción alternativa)
The descent begins with a series of medium-sized waterfalls: C8, C10, C14, C18, C16, before reaching the magnificent C100 (rope station on the right bank at approximately -6 m). The canyon continues across a boulder field before several waterfalls follow one after another just before the bridge (the Haute-Savoie topographic view is completely incorrect, as is its revised edition).

Possible exit at the lower end of C100. Possible exits at the upper end of C100, but the terrain is very steep and it will be difficult to reach a hiking trail.

Regreso: (traducción alternativa)
Follow the trail back up to the car. It is also possible to connect to the lower part by leaving this trail at an elevation of 1,230 m to reach a path and then a pedestrian bridge in the lower area.
