Résumé: (traduction alternative)
A beautiful and watery hike comparable to the canyons in Friuli. Open and narrower sections alternate. By bike, you can significantly shorten the access and park right at the exit. This reduces the access time from 2.5 hours to 1.5 hours (40 minutes of which are walking passages).

Accès: (traduction alternative)
Coming from Gmunden, drive into the village of Grünau im Almtal. At the edge of town, follow the signs for “Almsee 13 km.” After about 11 km on the Austrian Romantic Road, you’ll see a large, isolated farmstead (Schwarzenbrunn) on the right, followed shortly afterward by a bridge over the Weisseneggbach. This is where the bike route begins. According to the signs, you should park on the left after the bridge at the paid parking lot (with public restrooms) (€5 per car per day, including access to the swimming area). However, there are also parking options next to the road. Don’t be surprised! The GPS bike track was recorded during the preliminary reconnaissance at the nearest forest road. However, there is now a “No Bicycles” sign there.

Approche: (traduction alternative)
From the car parking lot, follow the mostly flat and wide forest road (MTB sign / permitted April 15–October 31!) alongside the Weisseneggbach on your bike. After a long stretch, you’ll cross the stream, and the forest road becomes steeper. This is followed by three switchbacks and a fork in the road. Here, follow the forest road to the left, marked by trail sign 420-04-06. The forest road now leads slightly downhill to the Nesselbach Bridge with a hunting lodge. From here, continue a little further back to the second hunting lodge with a fountain. Park your bike here and follow the distinct path right next to the stream until, after about 40 minutes and a few hundred meters of elevation gain, it meets the stream again (you could also start the tour earlier).

Tour: (traduction alternative)
There is a succession of many small steps and rappels of up to 30 meters. There are frequent sections with logs along the route, cold water, two exit/entry points, many slippery spots, mostly single pitons, several narrow sections, and rappelling points in the stream (check the water level!).

Retour: (traduction alternative)
After the last rappel, the canyon opens up again. At an elevation gain of approximately 830 meters, exit on the orographic left near the Steinmanderl and follow the hiking trail back to the bike parking area.

Access by bike only is recommended! the forest gorge is very slippery and, unfortunately, still had too many log barriers for our liking; those who don’t mind that will find plenty of beautiful individual sections. When the water level is high, it can quickly become uncomfortable. Very beautiful mountain scenery and a lovely alpine lake—we liked the lower section better, 2 new W-rings drilled + new topographic view under “Internal”; new MTB start—see photo (green dots) (traduction alternative)

Great route—congratulations to the first ascenders! As Georg already mentioned, without a mountain bike for access and return, it’s certainly very arduous; 2–3 anchors would still be useful, and with a lot (more) water, it’s definitely challenging! I’m deducting half a star because the first ascenders didn’t remove the obstructions□□! Great alpine setting—it’s every bit as good as the Bruckgraben!!! (traduction alternative)

Great canyon. You could also start the hike halfway down by rappelling down into the canyon from the trail as it climbs uphill. It’s just as rewarding, since there’s still a 30-meter rappel down the waterfall. Shortly before the end, there’s a relatively tight snag. Make sure to leave the ropes long and continue to rappel straight down. We didn’t find any anchors at that spot (the snag). (traduction alternative)

A very rewarding route. Cycling there significantly shortens the access, and the return trip is a pleasure. The route could definitely use 3–4 more anchors; we rappelled down 2 to 3 steps in some sections. There’s still quite a bit of wood along the route that needs to be downclimbed, but that isn’t too bothersome given the many beautiful sections. Some rappel points are right in the stream’s current, which could become problematic when the water level is high. Mix of 8mm and 10mm bolts (traduction alternative)
