Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Descent in red marl, similar in character to the neighboring canyon Rio Maggiore

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
Coming from Belluno, we take the SS 51 towards Santa Croce. Before we reach Lago di Santa Croce, at the exit of the highway, we first pass a cement plant on the right and then, 3.3 km further on, the Dolomiti restaurant/pizzeria, also on the right. 40m further on, we take the dirt road that branches off to the right and drive under the highway and uphill as far as we can get by car.
With the second car we drive up to Ponte degli Alpi (see Google maps under Links). Here we park the car in front of the cemetery.

Approche: (traduction alternative)
From the cemetery southwards to the bridge (entry).

Tour: (traduction alternative)

Retour: (traduction alternative)
After the flat parts at the exit of the descent, turn left onto the piste and back to the car.

There wasn't much point in repeating it today. The flow was really very low. A bit of debris in the upper section, and a couple of anchors positioned a bit precariously. One single-point rappel; the rest are two anchors that need to be linked together. Probably best done when the water level is higher.... (traduction alternative)

We started from the road where the Val Maggiore (intermedio) begins and walked up to the 30m waterfall for about 1h, then changed back to Maggiore. Nice rappel there. Superiore water level after the rain. (traduction alternative)
