Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Or ravine of Albarracín, both names refer to the toponymies in which it is located, the river and the hill. It is a simple ravine of not too high rappels, perfect place for initiation. It does not usually carry water except for very heavy rains.

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
We are located in El Bosque in the Sierra de Grazalema.
We will leave by the A372 towards Grazalema, past the p.k. 35 we have on the left the entrance to Benamahoma and the bus stop, here we could park the access car or if we only have one vehicle. We can continue until p.k. 36 and park in the area next to the Molino del Susto.
If we have a return car, we should have previously taken the A373, towards Ubrique. We drive 5kms and we turn off to Tavizna, here we will look for the signs of the Finca el Huertezuelo at 1.5 kms and we park there where we do not disturb.

Approche: (traduction alternative)
We will take the path that leads us to the remains of the Zahúrdas farmhouse, cross this small hill and on the other side we will only have to follow the dry riverbed of the stream.

Tour: (traduction alternative)
See topo
16 small rappels, many of which are climbable and quite a lot of steep slopes, all for beginners.

Retour: (traduction alternative)
If we have 2 vehicles we will only have to go down to the Huertezuelo farm.
With only one vehicle, when opening the ravine, when arriving at the spring, we will leave on the left to take a path that goes up the valley of the Charchones stream. The path, further on, turns into a track and goes to the road, on the other side there is a path that goes down to the parking lot at the mill.
