Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Nice canyon with short access and development, and a very long but entertaining return with two sections of via ferrata. Open and generally with a trickle of water except in summer. After rains it can be really fun.
If we want to avoid 2kms of track we will be able to leave a car at the exit but it does not advance much.

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
We must be located in Cortes de Pallás, which we will reach by the CV428.
About 200m from the village there is a track on the left (Otonel sign) along which we will go about 2.5kms to the basin of the Bujete ravine. A few meters before we have a track on the left where we can get in and park.

Approche: (traduction alternative)
We will continue along this track without entering the riverbed for about 100m and then we will enter the river shortly before the first rappel.

Tour: (traduction alternative)
Nice descent and well installed

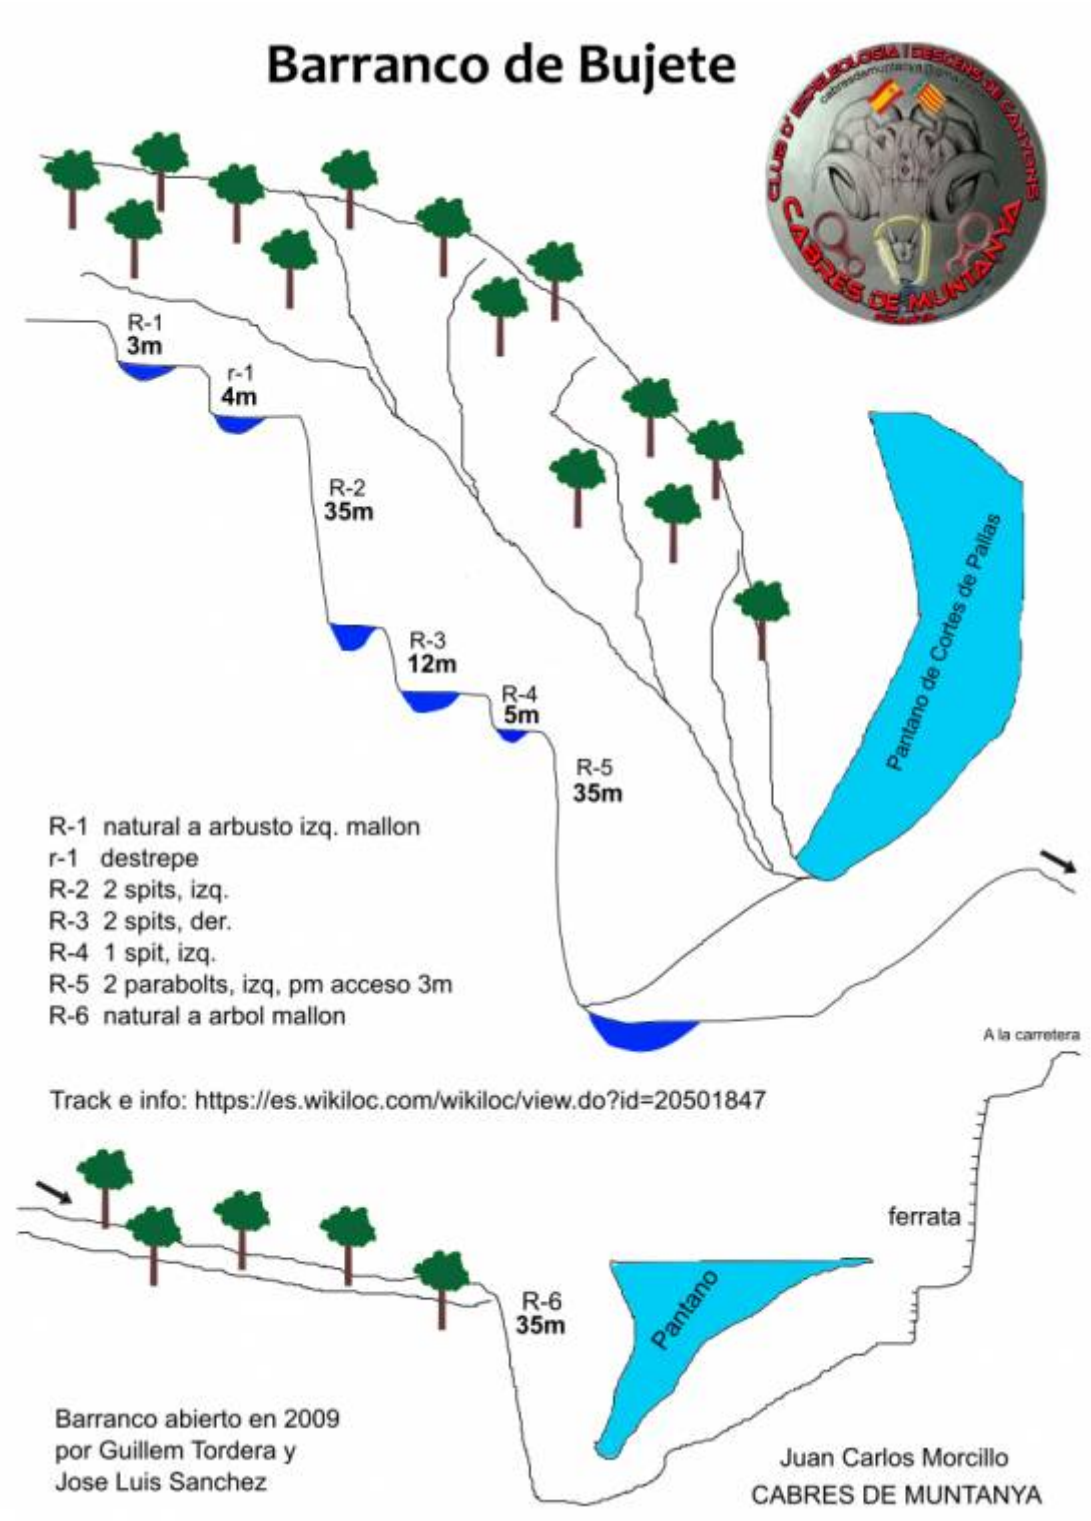

Retour: (traduction alternative)
After the last rappel we almost reach the reservoir and go to the right to the hillside, at the top we will see a small strip by which we will walk until we can not more because the wall does not allow us, here we will see a rappel installed in a tree that leaves us almost in the swamp. We will continue to the right by a small path towards the ruins of the works of the dam. As we approach the wall we will see the Ferrata by which we will have to climb. We will continue along the ridge and we will see a dirt track that leads us to the small road by which we accessed, turn right and follow the road to the stream and parking.
