Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Simple canyon without too much water that dries out in summer. According to some reviews it is for beginners but that second zone with the 35m rappel is perhaps more for someone who has already done at least 5-6 canyons. The access is almost all by track in regular conditions but it can be climbed slowly with a high car. There is the possibility of two cars to take off 15min of walking.

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
On the C16 from Berga to Puigcerdà, just after leaving Berga turn right onto the C26 to Ripoll.
Before reaching Borredà at pk 163.9 there is a forest track on the right, take it, go down to the river and cross it. Just after crossing makes a sharp turn to the left and comes out another track on the right. If our car is low or we see it badly we can park here.
We will continue along the track for a kilometer and a half until we cross a stream and make a couple of sharp turns and park.
If we have two cars we can follow the track to the "viewpoint".

Approche: (traduction alternative)
We continue along the track for another kilometer and in a sharp left curve there is a track on the right, we go along it until a curve to the left with good views as a "Mirador". From here looking at the valley we have the stream on our left and a path that goes down. It is immediate

Tour: (traduction alternative)
Without too many complications except for the final part which is a little more vertical.

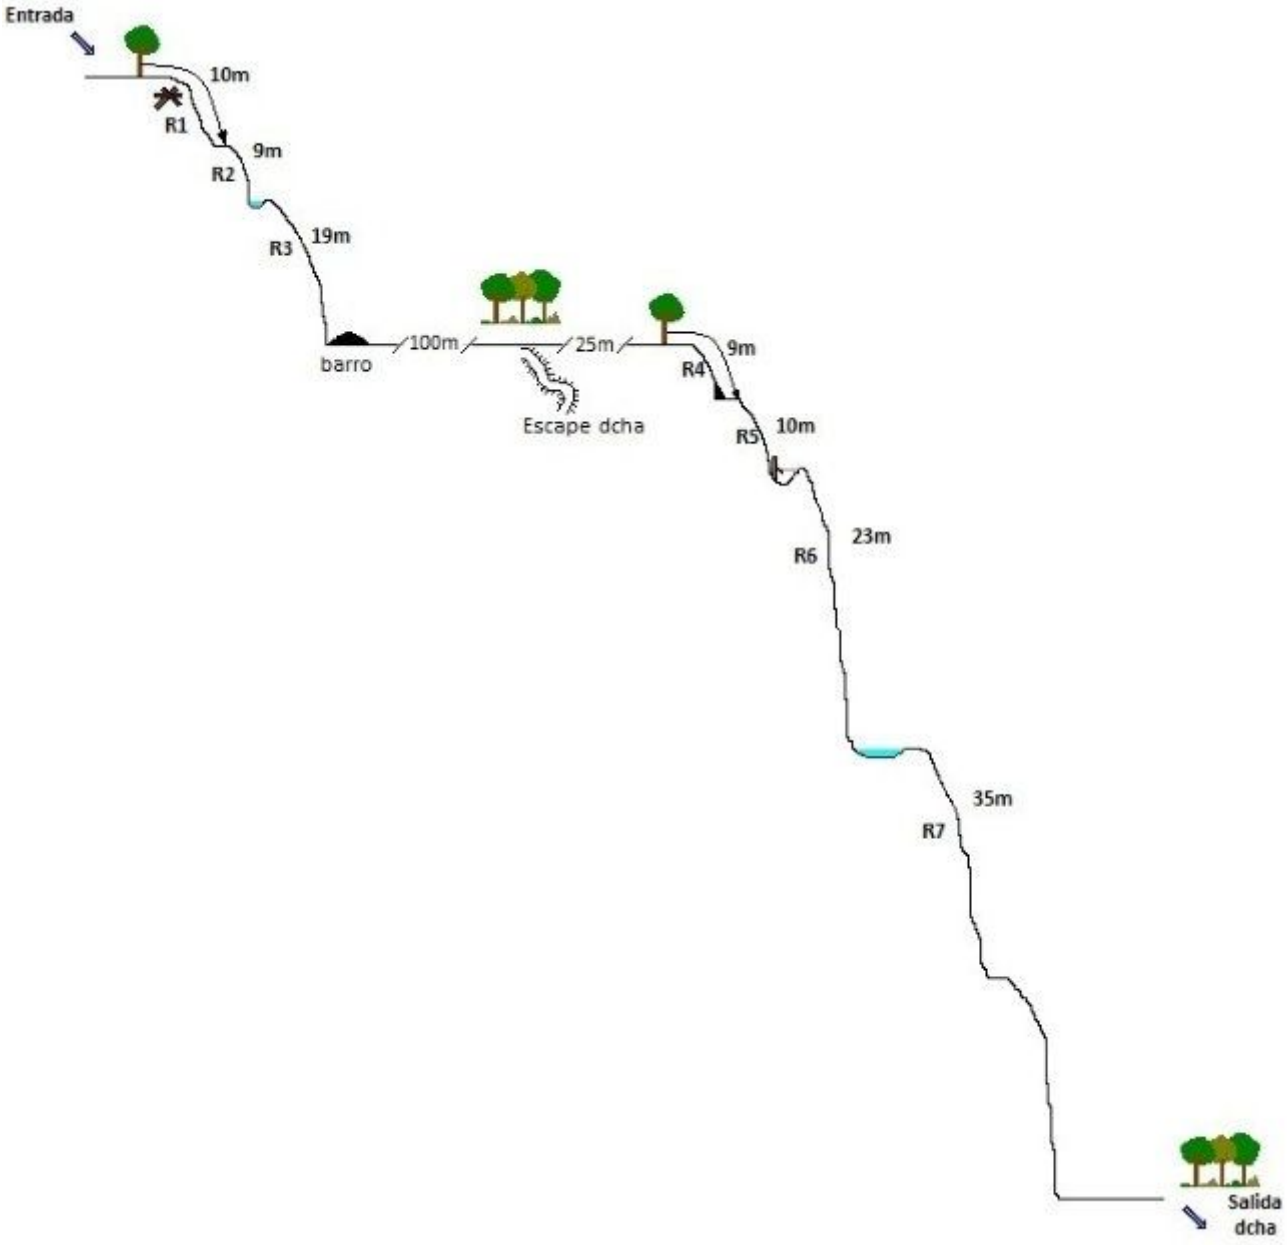

Retour: (traduction alternative)
After the 35m rappel we will see a path that later crosses the river and goes up to the track. Once on the track if we have parked in the curves we will go up about 200m and if we have parked below we will undo the way up.
