Résumé: (traduction alternative)
Simple previous ravine with low flow except for heavy rains, then a beautiful subway crossing with 30m high rooms and finally another small part of the ravine. Without great difficulties but very interesting with adequate flows.
If we do not want to do the upper part, we will access directly through the exit of the cave and we will do the round trip.

Hydrologie:

Accès: (traduction alternative)
By the A8 exit 319 to Ribadesella.
We are going to stop at the Llovio traffic circle, on the right we would have Ribadesella and on the left Arriondas. We will make the traffic circle almost complete and before taking the road back to the highway, we have an exit to a kind of service road, where is the road maintenance warehouse. We will park here

Approche: (traduction alternative)
We'll set out on the trail that runs under the highway to the meadow and the fence. Here we'll have two options:
1. Head directly up to the cave. To do this, we'll cross the fence and climb up through the meadow along the Tinganón stream, most of the way will be on the right side of the stream, and we'll need to be extremely careful since the rocks may be wet and the trail muddy, which can be dangerous. We'll reach the cave entrance, where a handrail has been installed to help us climb up safely.
2. Take the full route. The Wikiloc route indicates a path that doesn't actually exist as such. A large part of the journey is cross-country, through unpleasant (prickly) vegetation, with steep sections and no shade. This is not recommended and can be dangerous. It's better to use two cars: leave one in the parking lot under the highway and drive the other to the abandoned village of Peme to find the headwaters of the stream and hike down until it enters the cave, a few hundred meters before the cave's sinkhole.

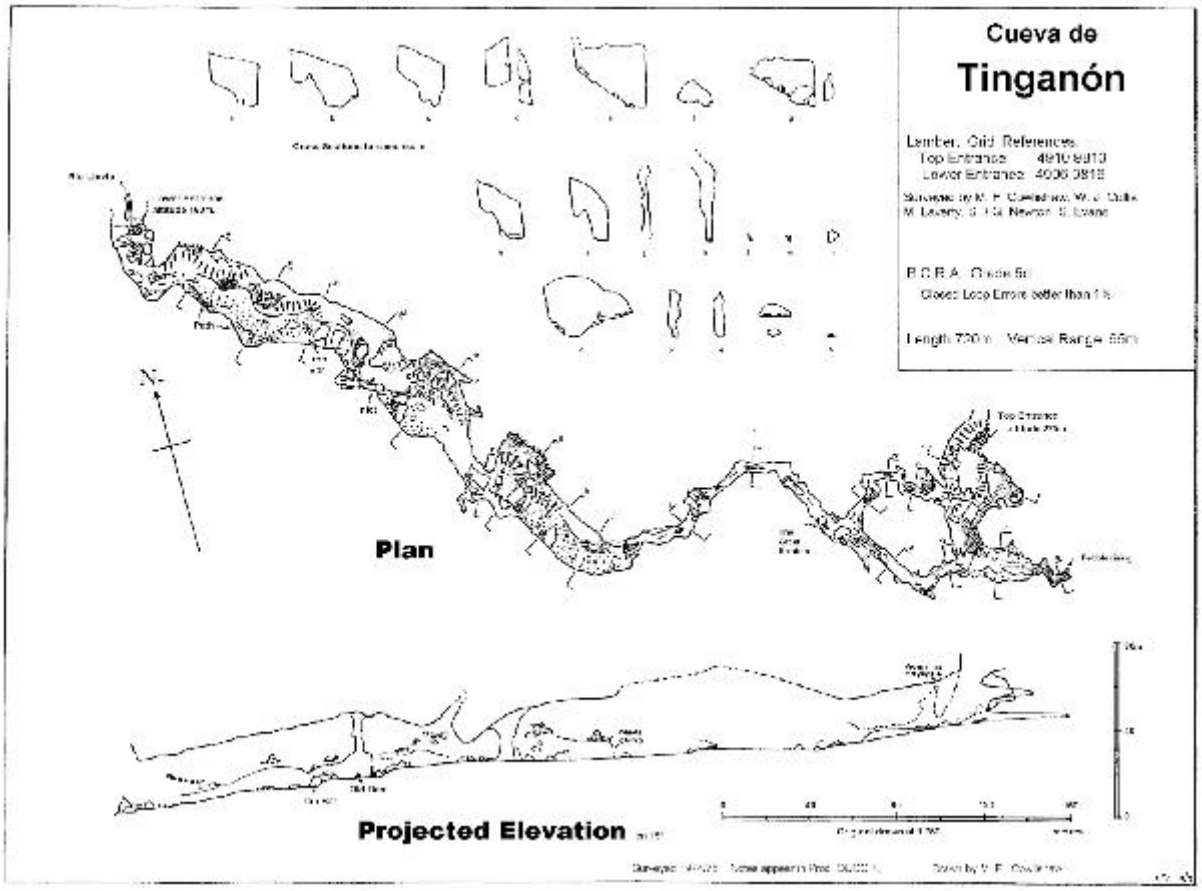

Tour: (traduction alternative)
See mole

Retour: (traduction alternative)
We will follow the access/return path to the highway.
