Résumé: (traduction alternative) Somewhat remote in a rustic scenic setting, even by Albanian standards. Friendly character due to the light-colored layered limestone and a few possible jumps and slides.

The access road is a real highlight. Stands all OK and available. Currently still a little running water. Very beautiful canyon. (traduction alternative)

The approach to the canyon turned out to be interesting. The route is actually only recommended with a 4x4 and a high wheelbase. We also drove there in a bus, but it felt like it needed the final anointing.... Tour was mega. The stands were all there and in good condition. Some of the rocks were slippery and covered with lichen, which of course also affected the water color a bit. (traduction alternative)

Nice and easy, combine with Limar and you have a full day. Hard return on a steady climb. (traduction alternative)

The road, later a piste, is passable with a scooter...less so with a normal car towards the end. Nice little canyon, unfortunately we were at the exit in a comfortable 1h30. As there was very little water flowing and it was very hot, we didn't do the Limar as well. (traduction alternative)

Hook ok. Access now faster on new part of the road, see Google Earth map section. there is at least one more canyon here - Limar - to walk, see book by Pascal van Duin. (traduction alternative)
